to go coed in

By MIKE ALLEN and BRUCE POTTER Chief Editors

Washington and Lee University will begin admitting women in the fall of 1985, the Board of Trustees decided July 14 after a two-day special meeting

The decision ends 235 years of all-male tradition at Washington and Lee and leaves only a handful of all-male, non-military liberal arts colleges

The resolution, passed 17-7 by the trustees after what was described as a "civil" yet 'vigorous' debate, reads as

"Resolved, that Washington and Lee University shall admit qualified students, regardless of gender, to all of its degree programs commencing in the Fall of 1985

The decision was announced at a 12 45 p m press conference in the Commerce School Nearly 50 media representatives attended the conference About 100 students and faculty members watched the press conference on television monitors in Reid Hall

Reading from a statement prepared by the board, which had voted on coeducation at 11:50 a.m., Rector James M. Ballengee said, "We are convinced that a stronger Washington and Lee and a stronger society will be the happy result of the decision we have made."

As many as 100 women will be admitted in the fall of 1985, said University President John D Wilson, adding that the board had hoped the school would have as many as 500 women students within 10 years

Wilson spoke of the "integrity, honor and character here," as well as "our superior teaching and learning and academic program

We believe that these values that are so important to Washington and Lee can and will be enjoyed by men and women equally, and that they will help to contribute to making these as much a part of the future as they have been of the past," he continned

Wilson also said at the press conference that he had voted in favor of the motion. Although he said he didn't specifically make a recommendation to the board, he was the first member to speak on the issue Saturday morning

"I suppose that could be construed as a recommendation, Wilson said

Another member of the board, whom Ballengee declined to identify, made the motion to adopt the resolution

Executive Committee President Cole Dawson and former EC President Robert C Jenevein represented the student body in the trustees' closed sessions Jenevein traveled to the meeting from Dallas at his own

Looking worn but enthusiastic. Dawson talked with reporters following the trustees' press conference "It's going to take an ef fort of the whole student body to implement coeducation in a positive way," he said

"It was really exciting when it happened. I still cannot believe the course of history has changed right here at Washington and Lee

Dawson said he was in favor of coeducation. "I didn't come out and directly tell them that, exactly," he said. "I told them at the end that my feelings were toward coeducation

"I don't think the market is there for an all-male school," he added "This school's not marketable as an all-male institution.

Charles D. Hurt Jr. of Atlanta. president of the Alumni Association, and former Alumni Association President Peter A Agelasto III, represented the alumni at the meeting

Among reports received by the board this weekend was an analysis of an alumni survey conducted this spring by a Richmond research firm. Of the 6,700 alumni who responded to that survey, 58.5 percent said they opposed coeducation, 28.9 percent said they favored it, and 10.6 percent said they had no opinion

Although Hurt said he did not make a specific recommendation that the board defeat coeducation, he did say the board was aware of the alumni's feelings because "we have had a continuous communication with the board as a whote as well as individually

Alumni will support the deci-sion, Hurt added ''I think the decision was the right decision. and I think the alumm will accept the decision," he said

In its statement the board

noted that "within the Board's membership itself opinion was divided, and the vote on the resolution's adoption, while strongly in favor, was not unanimous. However, now that the decision is made, the Trustees are united in pledging their full commitment to the successful implementation of the University's new course." At the press conference, Ballengee said, "We determined in advance that a decision of this magnitude should not be made by what one would call a slim majority or a narrow majority." He added that the number of votes in favor of coeducation, 17, exceeded the number of votes the board had decided to require, but he declined to identify that number

Two other trustees. A Chris tian Compton of Richmond and Edgar F Shannon Jr of Charlottesville, attended the press conference

Shannon was president of the University of Virginia when it first began accepting female students

Compton said he voted against coeducation "because I feel that we have put in place at this university a fine-tuned educational machine which is providing a high-quality education in a single-sex atmosphere," and has produced "a body of outstanding alumni who have succeeded eminently in all walks

However, Compton said, "Those of us who love and support Washington and Lee will work just as hard to make coeducation another positive factor as far as W&L is concerned.

"There is no appeal," added Compton, a justice of the Virginia Supreme Court

Shannon noted that the board studied many financial projections before making the deci-

Ballengee described the discussion preceeding the vote as "entirely civil, as Washington and Lee gentlemen should be, one to another There were people with differing points of "All of the issues that you could possibly imagine were discussed. It was a free, full and frank discussion 1 never heard anyone raise his voice. On the whole, it was polite "

Asked his feelings now that the debate finally had ended, Wilson said, "I feel exhausted, if you want to be absolutely candid about it. It's been a long and arduous undertaking (but) frankly, a rewarding time "

"I'm just looking forward to having it all be over," he had said in an interview earlier this

"A decision of this magnitude and complexity involves us atl in the re-examination of this university and its character. There is a spirit alive on the campus, a spirit of humaneness

"I feel very good about the decision. I think it was the right decision to be made," added Wilson, who, along with Ballengee, wore a Washington and Lee tie to the press con-

Relaxing at Lee House after the press conference, Wilson expressed hope that Washington and Lee now could begin to plan for the future in other areas

Wilson said at the press conference that the trustees authorized creation of a committee on coeducation, consisting of students, faculty and administrators, "to help guide us in every step of the way." Female law students and women faculty members will aid the committee, Wilson added

Among planned improve-ments to the university's physical plant are a $4 million to $5 million dormitory, which has been in the works for some time, and about $150,000 worth of renovations to the gymnasium areas to provide separate locker room and shower facilities for female students

"I trust that you're supportive of that," Wilson added, with a laugh

No, we're not going to hell in a handbag

Chief Editor "If e made history today We are the future -- Mondale toasting Ferraro

Painful as it was, the time had come to wake up, smell the cof-Iee, and admit women to Washington and Lee

The "no go co" forces have reached their Appomatox Now it's time for a little reconstruc-

The well-intentioned anti-coed people who fail to see that a well fought battle is over are welcome to take their marbles and go home; the rest of us are going to attempt to make coeducation the best thing that ever happened to W&L

It's heartsickening to realize that when I think of the people who love Washington and Lee the most and would do anything for it, I think of people adamantly opposed to coeducation. Those people have to feel betraved The hope has to be, though, that their regard for the institution is greater than their devotion to one particular aspect of it

This has been a most unpleasant civil war. During his 1984 commencement address. President Wilson told the graduates, "f know it has concerned you that we seem to be divided on this important matter, students, faculty, alumni and staff But that may be inevitable on a matter of such significance, and f live in the faith that it will not be a permanently disabling condition

We have to hope he's right

Dr Wilson is not, contrary to popular opinion, the Grinch that Stole Single Sex He is a person who was willing to be the point man, and consequently to be subject to unmitigated garbage, for a change which he, rightly or wrongly, believed was the best path for the institution he'd been hired to serve

The Board has said what the policy will be It is now incum bent upon us, through a combination of respect and coopera tion, to assist Dr. Wilson and his administration in implementing that policy as effectively and as smoothly as possible

The student government will be an important component of that effort. As you study history. it seems that strong leaders appear when they are most needed For the W&L student body, such a man is Cole Dawson.

His is a tough position. He follows the incredibly dedicated Bob Jenevein, who, like all pro-minent men, had vociferous. persistent critics. Cole, who is capable, willing to listen, and possesses integrity of the highest order, is up to the challenge

Once an opponent of coeduca-

further research and reflection He was, like us, willing to wholeheartedly support single sex if that was what was required of him The trustees, however, made what he came to believe was the better choice

He, by the way, should be credited with offering one of the most cogent observations to surface during the coeducation debate "Everyone's talking about 'male camaraderie What about female camaraderie?

The trustees have reached a conclusion similar to that of General Lee in April of 1865 It was time to cut their losses while what they had was still worth saving Lee realized that the losses he was sustaining were unacceptable, that to continue would invite further decimation of his turf, and that his men's commitment to the cause was waning. The trustees have made a similar decision

We have the rare opportunity to take a unique and still strong institution and propel it to even greater distinction

The trustees aren't trying to take our paradise away from us, they're making it possible for us to enhance it.

The pursuit of excellence, both in ourselves and in future students, is the key to the continued vitality and superiority of the University

The time is now. The chance is ours The fate is Washington and

&L going first class

Chief Editor

Last summer, before the question of coeducation was placed squarely on Washington and Lee's agenda. I was talking with a co-worker who graduated from William and Mary College, a relatively small but highly regarded coeducational school in Williamsburg

The conversation turned to colleges, and, inevitably, Washington and Lee coeducation Although partially in jest, a comment my colleague made that day forever will remain in my mind

Washington and Lee is being dragged, kicking and scream ing, into the 20th century," he said

I believed then that his comment was fairly accurate, and since, I have come to realize that it was even more so Now, after last weekend's decision, we have really entered the 20th century

And if each of us works at making coeducation succeed, Washington and Lee once again can join the ranks of the most illustrious colleges in the nation a position the school certainly deserves

No longer will we have to be dragged into the 20th century We can now move into the 21st century with our head held high, knowing that we had the courage to make a decision - in many ways unpopular and in all ways difficult - that will benefit this university

Many people assume that Lexington and Washington and Lee are quiet during the summer This is not entirely so A group of 17-year-olds, rising high school seniors known as Summer Scholars — both male and female - were on campus this month, participating in various programs the university offers

Also on campus this past week were tourists - again both male and female - from all over the country

They, too, marveled at the beauty and grace of Washington and Lee, and its history and quality

We must ask If they had visited Blacksburg, would they have toured Virginia Tech? continued on page 3

New student body president reacts to coed decision

To the editors

The result of this weekend's decision is one that will no doubt hit a nerve in the heart of everyone associated with Washington and Lee.

Never before in W&L's history has an issue fostered so much controversy and stirred so much emotion. Washington and Lee has survived many battles and coed will be another one -Washington and Lee is and always will be a distinguished university, due to its unique educational atmosphere. It will continue to produce honorable, intelligent, well-rounded in-dividuals who will be the movers and shakers in our society

Twenty years ago we were one of many all-male institutions We were not simply "another all-male institution, we were unique and will remain so, for the same reasons, far into the future. We have a strong tradition of honor, integrity and strength of character, along with the many values and ideals instilled in our university by General Lee.

After the Civil War, Lee had been defeated - his beloved South had lost all that it had believed in for so long. But he came to Washington College with an optimistic attitude that the future would hold more than what many believed to be a hopeless destiny. With his strength of character and will to succeed he created a fine institution - a better Washington and Lee This may seem trivial and trite, but we must have similar courage to strengthen our university - to use this opportunity to bring W&L up to its full potential

The chemistry of W&L's present atmosphere will change, but the fundamental foundation of the W&L experience will go on. This weekend's decision is hard to swallow Walking around campus after the decision, I had a gut-wrenching feeling in my stomach that came from the apprehension and uncertainty of the future. Will the intangibles so crucial to the W&L experience be lost, or will the admission of women strengthen our university and all that it stands for?

At one time, Washington and Lee competed strongly with such schools as Davidson. Duke and U Va. There is no question that W&L provides a much more unique and broadening education than these schools, but as of 1983 those schools were only accepting 33 percent of their applicants to fill their freshman class, whereas we now accept 60 percent of our applicants. The percentage has gone from 40 percent in 1965 to 49 percent in 1982, 57 percent in '83, and 60 percent in '84. The education that W&L offers, although unique and highly regarded by its students and alumnius simply not that attractive anymore 1 know, as I'm sure you do, of many who considered W&L but shied away due to the single-sex factor -also, many guys who were W&L material who came and transferred due to the all-male character

I will truly miss the mystical all-male quality of W&L, but am confident that admitting women is a positive move and one that will make W&L a stronger institution in the future

Contrary to seemingly popular opinion, it was not President Wilson who brought coeducation to the forefront and it is not his "fault" (not a fault at all, in fact) that we are destined to be a coeducational institution. I really believe that we are fortunate to have such an outstanding president. Watching him in the May board meeting and this weekend, I have seen an individual with as much dedication to Washington and Lee as any person I have ever seen. His knowledge and emotions for the school are admirable and deeprooted

Lastly, let me add that our present Board of Trustees is the result of 15 years of careful and deliberate selection by our former president, Robert E.R Huntley. This board has been acknowledged as one of the strongest groups of individuals to govern the school in its history They are all deeply rooted traditionalists, each of them as deducated to the university and to the preservation of the unique quality and character of education at W&L as the next There were tears in their eyes as they said goodbye to a 235-yearold tradition, and literally near tears as they gave their last statements before the vote

I know many students and alumni think W&L's traditions have been irrevocably lost I hope, though, that you will all pledge your support for a better Washington and Lee - the school we love so much The decision was a hard one - one that took into consideration both students' and alumni's views very seriously. Almost all day Friday was spent considering those opinions. But the decision has been made and the future and destiny of W&L has begun a new course. Listening to W&L's Latin motto, "Non in cautus futuri" - "Not unmindful of the future" - remember this as you look to tomorrow. We have so much to gain with a positive at-

Wilson: 'Integrity, honor' make W&L unique

Following are excerpts from an interview with President Wilson conducted at Lee House following the July 14 press con-

Q - Throughout the meetings this weekend, was there ever a point at which you thought the hoard might not be able to reach a decision?

- Well, we spent a long time discussing the pros and cons of delay, simply to defer a decision until students and alumni could become more fully acquainted with the whole range of issues that the board was struggling with That might be efficacious. but the board finally decided that would be a very bad thing to do, that it would be better in a way to reject it than to stretch it out and to keep secondary schools, prospective students, current students and key alumni all wondering what you were going to do I don't think it was really necessary. It's been a long study, really, about a year O - What can students who are here now and will be entering in the fall do to belo smooth the transition to coeducation?

A - That is a very, very crucial part of the whole success that we hope to achieve I'm not sure I have a blueprint in mind now

I think I'll sit down with the Ex ecutive Committee (in the fall) and get their suggestions on how that might work. We're going to name a steering committee on coeducation - they'll give us advice and counsel on that But you know finally it's going to depend upon the generosity of spirit of the Washington and Lee men to say that 'we have a good thing and we want to share it The board has decided we have to share it with women students equally and let's see how to make it easiest for these girls

Q. - Do you think the first few classes of females might have a problem fitting in?

A - I believe that that's been the experience at other places that they have felt they're going to be a very small minority for some years while the numbers build up And that's always a problem with feeling a little bit special and a little bit different before they become integrated student life on the newspaper staff, the radio station, student government. That will take probably a few years 1 am sure there are ways of doing things, ways of talking, ways of pretending women aren't there that we'll have to try to remold, all of us It will require some sensitivity At Yale I think they found a lot of their organizational structure had to change The Outdoor Club never dreamt that there would be women applying Well, they applied. But I trust we'll have little difficulty with that But I must say, at first, when I discovered last fall how strongly the students felt, or at that time felt, I was never sure whether the students were simply reacting to the idea or whether they were taking real thought about the future and well-being of their alma mater I think, as the year went on, as more and more factors were brought out into the open, that some of that sharp antagonism tended to soften

Q. - Why did you take so long to express directly your opinion on the issue?

A - Let me say this, that my opinion was formed, again, over an evolutionary process over time I had a meeting with my staff up on the mountain in July of last summer. Of course, I arrived in January My faculty conversations began then in earnest; I had had fall conversations with staff about various aspects of university life Then when I got here, I started these faculty conversations and then my senior dinners went on that spring. And by May I had learned enough from the admissions side about the quality and declines in the key areas. It is not easy to dismiss the fact that we have fewer students from the upper quintile of their high school graduating classes today than we had 15 years ago, remarkably fewer, you can't

That was Campus Life committee conin May, but I was still a long way cluded in its examination that from knowing what my own mind would be Last summer. co-curricular life, extra-curricular life would on balance be better with men and women when I was up on the mountain together. The Academic Affairs with my staff - just the administration, we spent two days committee report said on balance, in fact, the academic up there - and that was only one topic, but it was the last one, and quality of our students would imwe talked it all through. I talked to people from the paper I wrote in October, I started to get feedback And that's when you start to question yourself. I had selfdoubts about this all along I did think it was right to raise the questions associated with it. But

A - Of course, any institution can make claims of that sort, but I do think there's a pattern of success here that is traceable to a heightened sense of mutual caring I don't want to exaggerate that, but I think the students have a lot of respect for each other and look out for each other and have a lot of respect for the faculty and vice versa, so that creates an environment of. we call it civility, but of mutual trust. That translates still further into an absolute willingness by the faculty to meet with students and to be of belo to them, in their personal lives as well as in their academic work. and that, in turn, I think, has managed to contribute to the cultivation of self-confidence, and ultimately we have a greater measure of success in the world I think that it is important for us to try to recruit classes with the same human qualities in our women students that we've managed over the years to have represented in our male student population. In other words, I think character and integrity and honor and a desire to learn - all of these things are important parts of Washington and Lee and I am most anxious to ensure that those qualities are enhanced by our women students.

A. I think the whole admissions area is going to be very difficult for all colleges and universities. strong institutions, will help us in that work, but I don't think it will provide some quick solution.

If they had visited Richmond. would they have toured Virginia Commonwealth University?

Perhaps not Although both are good universities, they are missing something that Washington and Lee has It's an intangible that's difficult to describe, but it extends beyond the "all-male spirit" of which we are so proud Perhaps it has something to do with the stately Colonnade, its freshly painted columns shining in the summer sun, the ivy climbing up the back of its buildings. Or perhaps it is the new library and Law School. modern buildings that blend in so well with those constructed 200 years ago Or perhaps it is the statue of George Washington atop the building named after him, visible from anywhere on campus, seeming to watch over us all

Now, though, we can make the further improvements and changes necessary to return to that upper echelon of colleges and universities Washington and Lee can once again become a force to be reckoned with, rather than a small, liberal arts school in the Shenandoah Valley that is offering a choice fewer and fewer college-age students seem to want

Washington and Lee's doors no longer will be closed to women. No longer will we have to turn away more than 50 percent of the population No longer will the fine education of Washington and Lee be available to men

That, I believe, is the crucial point. What right does (or did) Washington and Lee have to deny an education to a woman?

Those tourists this weekend, those Summer Scholars, obviously found the Washington and Lee campus and atmosphere enjoyable and enlightening. Several female Summer Scholars promised to apply here next year for the fall of 1985 They realize that the first few classes of women at Washington and Lee may have difficulties. but they were willing to risk that for a chance to participate in the Washington and Lee experience. And we have no right to deny them that opportunity, based on a philosophy that became outdated in the mid-1900s and seems archaic today

The Board of Trustees made the right decision this weekend - the decision that had to be made In many cases, they may have put their true personal feel ings aside for the betterment of this university

The debate over coeducation undoubtedly has been long It has lasted sporadically for more than 15 years Opinions have fluctuated wildly Students, faculty and alumni have disagreed on the issues. There has been a great deal of discussion about this university and its place in American collegiate

But this introspective discussion, whether for or against coeducation, has been helpful We have undergone a rigorous process of self-examination and have found faults with the system in areas other than those related to coeducation Without question, Washington and Lee has lost something by the decicoeducation question, we can now turn to fixing those other problems. Now is the time to put aside the arguments and the bitterness, the slogans and the bumper stickers

We all must join together, so that Washington and Lee can stride boldly and aggressively into the future - as the two great men who gave us our name would have wanted us to do

McHenry optimistic

By PAUL FOUTCH News Editor

Although Washington and Lee's athletic department will feel many of the effects of coeducation, Athletic Director William McHenry expressed optimism that the changes will not be too drastic

One of the major concerns in the athletic department was that coeducation without an increase in total enrollment - the change approved by the Board of Trustees July 14 - would reduce the pool of prospective male athletes, causing a drop in the quality of W&L sports.

But McHenry said in an interview after the decision that only the sports with larger squads -such as football, baseball and soccer - will feel the effects

"I think probably in some sports there won't be a negative effect at all," McHenry said

At the press conference an nouncing the coed decision, university President John D Wilson predicted a $150,000 in itial cost for the changes needed on the Warner Center

McHenry said these will include dividing the locker room in half, providing separate entrances to the weight room and the old pool, and adding more offices on the upper level of the gym

Another change required by coeducation will be the addition of female staff members, including a women's athletic director and a trainer.

"I would hope that there would not be an elimination of any of our current coaches and teachers," McHenry said

McHenry predicted that additional field space, which he said was needed even if W&L remained all-male, would include an artificial, all-weather field, an allweather track and one or two more playing fields

The first female varsity sports to be introduced will probably be limited to individual sports, such as swimming, track, golf and cross-country, McHenry said. with five or six sports offered in the first two years and 10 to 12 within five years

Wilson, who assumed the presidency early in 1983, received criticism from several quarters while the debate and study on coeducation were in progress. Prior to the trustees'

Campus reactions vary

The Board of Trustees' decision to begin admitting women to Washington and Lee in the fall of 1985 evoked many reactions from faculty, students and staff who were on campus for the decision:

. Former EC President Robert C. Jenevein, who once vigorously opposed coeducation but says he has since modified his position. looked tired and disconsolate after the meeting, but said he hoped the students would make coeducation work

They have to open their arms to the new Washington and Lee," he said. "That won't be impossible by any stretch of the imagina-

· Nearly 100 faculty and students watched the press conference on television monitors in Reid Hall For the most part, they greeted Ballengee's words with applause and listened attentively to the remainder of the press conference, chuckling appreciatively at the appropriate moments.

· Among those watching with interest was Peter Whitehead, who graduated in May but was one of the leading pro-coeducation students. Whitehead had unfurled a banner at the Mock Democratic Convention that read Deadheads." "Better Coeds

"I think the trustees made an unpopular decision, but it was a good one," Whitehead said "I am pleased Now I think we'll see better male and female students '

· Another student who came to Lexington to hear the decision was Scott Tilley, a rising senior and opponent of coeducation

"I was very disappointed," Tilley said "Up to the last moment, I didn't think they'd do it.

"I think Washington and Lee as an institution is going to thrive and will continue, but I have the feeling that as of today, the Washington and Lee I've come to know and love no longer exists · Dr Louis W Hodges, a professor of religion and ethics who led a committee which studied coeducation in 1969, called it "just a splendid decision '

"I can't imagine anything that would have done more to improve the education environment," he said "The board is to be commended. They worked at it very carefully, and rendered what is certainly the right decision

· A faculty member who opposed coeducation and asked not to be identified because he says he plans "to keep a low profile henceforth," said the initial female applicants to W&L are likely to be voung ladies on the prowl.

"Washington and Lee is going to become Fort Lauderdale North," he said "Most girls are going to enroll here because this is Where the Boys Are . In the face of all the philosophical and academic viewpoints of the day, some were more concerned about the practical implications of the decision. "Big John" Alexander, who has been a W&L custodian for 10 years, said he opposed coeducation

"Women are one of the most beautiful things God put on earth, but they're so much messier than men," he said very seriously.

· Betty Munger, who said she advocated coeducation in the 16 years she was the W&L bookstore manager, was amused but not surprised at all the media attention given the vote. "It is interesting that a small college in the backhills of Virginia should be debating whether to educate women," she said

 As President John D. Wilson exited the news conference, he made a jesting reference to his daughter, Sara, who will be a high school junior in the fall.

"I want you all to know my daughter won't be coming here," he said. "I didn't want to be accused of being self-serving.

Some of the 17 fraternities "could go under" because of the decreased male population, Wilson said, although he noted that some of those are already financially unstable

We do have a commitment to our fraternities," Wilson added 'Even now, they're undergoing some self-reformation, and we're going to encourage that in every way possible."

The possibility of sororities on campus will be discussed when the women arrive in 1985, Wilson

A number of press accounts of the event took note of the days on which the trustees' discussions were held "Yes, we know that decision one way or the other yesterday was Friday the 13th and that today is Bastille Day,' News Office Director Jeffrey G Hanna said in a press kit distributed at the news conference

Wilson said in an interview before the meeting that he hadn't expected "the degree of broader public interest in the decision here

A Personal Perspective

By I. Thomas Touchton, '60

(Before the Trustees cast their votes on the coeducation resolution on July 14, each member of the Board was given an opportunity by the Chair to make a summary comment on the issue. After the decision was reached and announced, several Trustees recommended that the remarks made by Trustee J. Thomas Touchton, '60. of Tampa Fla, be carried in the Alumni Magazine Mr Touchton, who played a very active part in the Trustee's coeducation study as a member of both the Budget and Audit and the Campus Life Committees of the Board. consented to our request to use his statement to help our readers achieve a better understanding of the Board's study and subsequent decision - Ed)

When the coeducation issue began to be considered again last year for the third time in 15 years, I did not really know what I personally would decide on the issue. I am a traditional, conservative person who is comfortable with traditional male-temale roles and who, in 1975 while on the Washington and Lee Alumni Board, said that I would be opposed to coeducation unless it was the only way to maintain the academic quality of the institution

When the issue was raised by President Wilson, we were coming out of a period of "inactivity" that occurred at the end of a long capital fund drive and after one and a halt year transition to a new president. I believe President Wilson saw quickly the magnitude of a problem (as conveyed to him by the faculty and the admissions office) and sought to act quickly to find a solution While there has been concern about the manner in which the issue reached the Board of Trustees. I do not doubt the need for the issue to have been raised

President Wilson was correct in saying to us in his initial communication last October that "we are worried about maintaining the quality of this place worned about trying to make a fine university better." He then siad, there lies a serious danger for the future health and earnestly believe usefulness of this venerable institution. And as a member of the Board of Trustees, sharing with my colleagues a deep fiduciary responsibility for one of America's precious assets. I teel duty-bound to place my calculation of that danger squarely before you." It gives me no comfort to question the timing when I consider the nature and magnitude of the problem

During the last 10 or so months, I have

- · Read and considered every letter sent to me by alumni, faculty, students, and friends of W&I
- · Read virtually every word of the 1970 and 1975 coeducation studies as well as the multiple pounds of other material sent to us. That material included reports from the Academic Attairs, Campus Life, and Budget and Audit committees as well as numerous other reports of many kinds
- Spoken on the telephone or in person with dozens of W&L alumni around the country
- Visited with several dozen other persons who are or have been associated with Sewanee, Davidson, Williams, Amherst, Dartmouth, Colgate, Princeton, Harvard, Notre Dame, the University of Virginia, Yale, Haverford, and others, all of which are institutions that have become coeducational in the last 15 or so years. The persons with whom I spoke were former trustees, university presidents, alumni, admissions representatives, and students
- · Finally, I have spoken with a few individuals who are college admissions counselors at public high schools and private preparatory schools
- I have agonized over many aspects of the coeducation issue and have examined and re-examined my teelings and thoughts

I would try to write a case for remaining all male, then one for going coed, then pick them apart and start over. Like the rest of you, I have spent hundreds of hours talking, thinking, and wondering what is best for this special place. Even Trustee Emeritus Jack Warner, whose generosity to this institution which he loves is among the greatest of all of W&L's sons, challenged me with his letters. While I sharply disagreed with the nature and quality of his comments, his letters forced me to re-think, re-examine, look deeper, and think harder about all aspects of the issue. In that sense, his letters served a positive purpose

About two months ago, I reached my conclusions, and I made no secret of my feelings at the May Trustee's meeting. It is my intention to vote in tayor of coeducation, because I believe firmly that it is the correct decision for us to make for W&L in 1984

There are what I would call "positive" and "negative" reasons for supporting my decision. It is very hard to separate them from each other since all are valid but represent different viewpoints of the problem. The "negative" reasons relate to believing that we should respond to worrisome demographic trends as well as increasing competition from other universities for students in a shrinking market and also the recent trends relative to the quality of what is reterred to as our student body's "soggy bottom." In addition, I do not believe that W&L should go coed solely to add the female point of view to the campus, although I believe it would be a plus to have it. I also do not believe that W&L breeds a chauvinistic or "warped" view of the world. Finally, it may be a negative reason to support coeducation on the basis that if we have to reduce our institutional size, we will spread our fixed costs over fewer units, thereby increasing our costs of production, so to speak, as competitive pressures rise - and we do this in a world that is likely to remain very volatile and in which risk-taking can quickly create economic disasters. Shrinking our size is not a viable option

I do not call these reasons "negative" because they are not true. (They do remind me of Satchel Paige's addage, "Don't look back, someone may be gaining on you!") Rather, these are "negative" reasons because they do not permit proper attention to be given to positive reasons for becoming coed. That is to say, it is a way of saying, "Look what happens if we don't become coeducational" instead of saying, "Look what happens if we do"

The positive reasons for becoming coeducational are strong indeed, in my opinion. I believe that our mission here is an educational one - splendidly expressed in our Statement of Institutional Philosophy with which we are all tamiliar and which it is our duty as Trustees to see implemented in every aspect of university life

I believe that we should aspire to be the best small university in the South, and one of the best in the nation, not elitist in a negative sense, but a tine school with a strong human as well as educational values. I believe we have generally been successful in the past in doing this and that this is a great part of the "intangibles" to which so many refer

It is significant that a great majority (admittedly, not all) of the people to whom we entrust the teaching, training, and care of our students are in favor of coeducation. And it is significant to me that while 60 percent of the alumni who responded to the survey expressed opposition to coeducation, 94 percent believe "quality of the faculty" is a "most important" factor in their consideration of W&L's reputation, that 87 percent believe "academically selective in admissions" is a "most important factor"; and, that 86 percent believe "W&L's goal should be continued academic excellence, regardless of the gender of its students." On the other hand, I must contess that I am sorry to learn from the survey that 23 percent of the respondents are willing for W&L to remain all male even if it would "require some downward adjustment of W&L admissions standards" -- a preference that is unacceptable to me as a Trustee

Relative to student attitudes toward coeducation, it is significant to me that even though 53 percent of our current students are opposed to coeducation, 62 percent believe coeducation is in the best interests of the institution while only 25 percent believe it is not

Finally, it is significant to me that of the dozens of persons with whom I spoke who have a relationship with institutions that became coeducational, there were only two who believed we should remain all-male - and their reasons were more nostalgic than any other - and none expressed to me that they regretted their institutions had become coed; most said it was the best thing that had ever happened and that the net effect of the change had been extremely positive

I strongly believe that the educational experience at W&L will improve it it becomes coeducational at the undergraduate level. The overall student quality will improve as a dramatic increase in applications permits a more selective admissions policy. These better students will be more motivated and will be better able to respond to the tougher curriculum that already is planned to be implemented. Most important, the absence of academically poor students who are less motivated and less participating in the lite of the University will result. I believe, in a lessening of the disillusionment that is growing among taculty members and which is reducing the effectiveness of the educational process. The better classroom experience will encourage the faculty and bring better motivation and competition to all aspects of campus life and behavior Not least, it will serve to strengthen the "close faculty-student relationships" about which we talk so much but which are being damaged by the poor quality of academic performance and social behavior presently on campus. We must maintain an outstanding teaching faculty, and we can do that only if we provide the proper environment in which we can exist

In addition to an improved academic environment, I believe there would be a greatly improved social environment. In my lengthy report at the May Board of Trustees meeting I conveyed my subcommittee's conviction that "coeducation would result in strongly positive changes occurring throughout the social and extracurricular life of the University." This conviction is shared not only by most faculty members but also by the administration and probably by most of the students Without questioning for a moment the sincerity and depth of feeling conveyed to all of us by the dozens of alumni who have written to express their views. I believe that our responsibility as Trustees is not to protect the alumni's perception of what W&L was like when they were here - although I think we hope to do that Rather, it is to do whatever is necessary to toster an atmosphere and expenence which best results in our institutional purpose being achieved. After all, would not those same alumni who oppose coeducation so vocally now be even more upset it we permitted W&L to decline in quality? And are they not likely to be more proud and supportive of a high-quality coeducational university than a mediocre all-male university?

We must find a way, as Dr. Sidney M B Coulling (head of the department of English) suggested in his letter to President Wilson, to combine properly the concepts of being "distinctive" and "distinguished." We can be "distinctive" as a coed institution if we "distinguish" ourselves by the quality of our academic program and by the encouragement and appreciation of the values and traditions which we all believe are so much a part of the W&L expenence we want to preserve and which frequently are not a part of the expenence found at other institutions

Therefore, when Jack Warner says, "Dare to be different!" I would respond "At what cost and at what loss of opportunity?" Do we invest our energy and our talent and our funds trying to be better - or use them up trying not to get worse?

Perhaps those who say "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" are really saving that nothing has changed at Washington and Lee.

- 1. But it is a change that the academic quality of our students is declining. Our SAT scores are down more than the national average and more than our competition. The comments about student quality contained in faculty letters to President Wilson, and subsequently conveyed to us, are alarming
- 2. And it is a change that, sociologically, the role of the female in the United States during this last third of the 20th century is dramatically different from what is has ever been before in the history of this country - indeed, in the history of the world - and there is no suggestion that this is the only a fad that will go away. In that regard, a case can be made and should be made that it is poor judgement (and maybe worse) to deny W&L's special qualities to talented effective females who are and will be so important a part of the leadership of this nation in the future
- 3. And it is a change, demographically, that the number of college-bound student will be in a dramatic decline for many years ahead and that the competition for that smaller number of students is increasing. The financial aid packages available to students from private and state universities are impressive and are an indication of what the marketplace will reflect even more intensely in the future
- 4. Finally, but importantly, it is a change, again sociologically, that there is less and less interest among college-bound students — especially males — in attending single-sex institutions. In this environment, W&L is increasingly perceived to be weird, not just different, and not just an educational alternative. Young people today are more sophisticated and aware than ever before, and they feel a need to be compatible with this changed world

What do I believe it will mean to Washington and Lee University to remain

- 1. Basically, that we will spend our energy and our funds simply trying to hold on, trying to prove to the world and to ourselves that we are something special, and having fewer and fewer believe us as our own self-doubt increases
- 2. We will lose market share and be forced to take more students of lesser quality, then we will begin to lose our tine faculty, and eventually we will lose our reputation. Already we have alumni telling us that they are not impressed by the fact that the company we keep in the all-male school category includes Hampden-Sydney, Wabash, a technical school, and two military schools while the company they want us to keep includes the University of Virginia, Williams, Dartmouth, Princeton, Amherst, Brown, Yale, Duke, Vanderbilt, and a host of others.
 - 3. Finally, the same and even more alumni who said "Don't go coed" will begin to say "Why did you let this happen to my school?"

It has been said that young men choose Washington and Lee for every reason except for its gender. I believe that we should offer an institution while both young men and young women choose for non-gender reasons. I believe we should emphasize academic quality most of all - as found in close student-taculty relationships and the diversity and excellence of our academic program — and I believe we should emphasize the traditions and values which we have here and which we offer to all who are a part of the W&L community

I believe that we should make clear - beginning today - that it is our intention that those values and traditions tound here are to be pursued and supported in a spirit of renewed commitment, and I believe we accomplish this by conveying in a tone of confidence, conviction, and caring, a decision to become coeducational at the undergraduate level of our academic program

I believe we should announce that decision to - r alumni and our other constituencies in a positive, forceful way with emphasis on our belief that the best way to keep intact those special qualities that most alumniand faculty and students and administrators really think are important, is to become coeducational — and that this Board of Trustees believes this is the best way to insure our continued meaningful role as one of the better small universities in this

I believe we should go to work immediately, carefully planning what we want to say to our tuture male and temale students, telling them of the traditions, academic excellence, values and codes of conduct that are found at this special place, and finally dealing from strength and not being afraid to do so, we tell them what we expect relative to their behavior and performance

We communicate to our president, and ask him to communicate to his statt and faculty, that we are going to have a first-rate institution here - an institution that reaches out to young men and young women who have exhibited the abilities and talents which we want to nuture and encourage here and we bring these young people into this community which we call Washington and Lee University

We educate them splendidly. We reinforce the values and traditions that we believe are so important - strong character, a sense of honor and integrity. responsibility, leadership, and most of all academic proficiency. And we send them out into this volatile, changing world to be successful individuals in their personal, family, and business lives, leaders in their communities and professions - as W&L prides itself on doing - and we ask them to be loyal and generous to the institution which educated them and which reinforced the ideals that caused us to bring them here in the beginning, the same ideals that are within this Board and this administration and this faculty

Deep down inside of me, I believe that a coeducational Washington and Lee will permit this to happen. I believe that the academic, sociological, economic, and political realities of the world that we are living in - and will be living in will not permit that to occur at and all-male Washington and Lee Will Washington and Lee change? Of course it will, as it has done so many times in the past. Do I have concerns about our future? Yes, I do.

- I lam most concerned that the disenchantment among many of our alumni might be more severe than we realize and that the absence of support will be greater than we expect, not just support of the pocketbook but support of the spint. I take some encouragement from knowing that similar situations were overcome so quickly at other institutions, and I know of no reason why Washington and Lee alumni are less loyal or less understanding than alumni of other institutions which we admire.
- 2. I am concerned that we will not make the transition as smoothly as we hope, that we won't plan for it as well as we should or execute it as well as we could, and that this will cause anxious moments. This concern must cause us to make doubly certain that it is not warranted
- 3. I think it is likely that we will lose a little of the intangible quality that we have trouble totally defining but which we know is there and which we and so many alumni fear will be lost

But with these concerns having been expressed, it is my firm belief that the advantages and benefits and positive aspects resulting from coeducation will greatly outweigh the disadvantages and the problems and that this will become apparent to us quickly

We have the burden and the privilege of being in a position to act at this time on this entical issue. It will take courage to vote in favor of such a dramatic change, but in my heart of hearts, I believe we will have made the right decision for the future of this institution to which all of us are devoted

Summer Politics

The 1984 presidential campaign got into full swing with the Democratic nomination of Walter Mondale for president and Geraldine Ferraro, the first woman ever on a major party ticket, for vice president. Mondale's choice of Ferraro, a New York congresswoman from the Borough of Queens, brought excitement to his ticket. Mondale and Ferraro were running against the incumbent Ronald Reagan and his best man, George Bush. The federal deficit was a major issue in the campaign. Reagan said he would continue with the policies he began in 1980 — policies that had failed to balance the budget. Unlike Reagan, Mondale said he would raise taxes to reduce the deficit.

Summer Games

The 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles were a great success for American athletes, partly because of a sovietled, 15-country boycott. Americans won 174 medals — 83 gold, 61 silver, and 30 bronze. Some of the most memorable performers:

- Carl Lewis, who equaled Jesse Owens' feat by winning four gold medals in track and field.
- Mary Decker and Zola Budd, who battled it out in the 3,000 meters. As Decker, a 26-year-old American, tried to get the inside track on Budd, an 18-year-old, barefoot South African-turned-Briton. Decker tripped over Budd's leg, reinjuring her leg. Decker cried tears of rage, recalling that an injury and a boycott had kept her out of two previous Olympiads. Budd finished in seventh place, crying

Mock Con '84

In May, Washington and Lee's Mock Democratic Convention successfully predicted the nomination of Walter Mondale by the Democratic party and, although the W&L crowd came close to nominating Geraldine Ferraro for Vice President, the bid was given instead to Senator Lloyd Bensten of Texas.

Some of the highlights of the weekend included:

- Numerous floats in the parade reflecting mostly negative student views of the coeducation question,
- Speeches by Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.), Senator Jennings Randolph (D-WV) who extolled the assembly to

"VOTE, VOTE, VOTE!," Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who had been in the running for the Democratic nomination early on in the race, Governor Charles Robb of Virginia, and Lee Feldman.

- The appearance of quite a few "Nixon Now More Than Ever" bumper stickers on the convention floor.
- A poorly attended yet wellpublicized Sunday concert on Wilson Field featuring Bruce Springsteen's saxophonist Clarence Clemmons and The E Street Band with the lead act of Shor Patrol. The concert was sponsored by the Student Activities Board and the Interfraternity Council.

All in all, the 1984 Mock Convention was true to W&L form, more party, less Party.

Co-ed Decision

On July 14, 1984, the Washington and Lee Board of Trustees voted 17-7 to make the undergraduate school coeducational Fellin. Police in Teaneck, N.J., said that Mesner had been convicted of arson earlier in the year for setting a small fire in a dormitory at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Teaneck. Mesner's trial was scheduled for December.

Lisa-B

Lisa Birnbach, that wonderful author who brought us such classic works of ill literature as The Official Preppy Handbook, left another trail of slime called Lisa Birnbach's College Book. Her review of W&L left much to be desired, including the withering of her writing hand. Here are just two examples from her list of W&L's attributes:

Frat Fracas

More than 40 students met with administration and faculty members to discuss the fraternity regulations that were put into effect this year. Those rules included a limit of four weekend parties that could be held in each fraternity house each term, and a restriction of Wednesday night parties to include members of the house throwing the party and their dates. The rules were passed to reduce some of the wear on fraternities, and to limit the size of midweek parties. Students complained that the rules were too restrictive, but the administration countered that the rules were proposed and passed by student leaders the previous year, and any complaints should have been raised

The student activities pavilion, built over the summer to reduce the wear on fraternity houses, and to provide a nearby place where the Student Activities Board could stage concerts, made its debut by housing a concert by the Spinners for Homecoming Weekend.

Built at a cost of $677,000, the pavilion is being paid for with a fifteen-year loan from the University to the student body. The loan will be paid back by students via a twenty-five dollar-a-year amount to be taken out of each student's student activities fee

National-International Reagan Wins Big

Not surprisingly, President Ronald Reagan was elected to a second term in a landslide. Reagan captured all the electoral votes except those of Washington D.C. and Minnesota, Walter Mondale's home state. Reagan claimed to have received a conservative mandate from America, but democrats, whose party appeared to be in long-term trouble, pointed out that if the election were a mandate, the congressional races would have resulted in overwhelming Republican victories. In fact, the Republicans picked up only 15 seats in the House half as many as they had hoped for leaving it in control of the Democrats. And in the Senate, the Republicans actually lost two seats, but remained in the majority.

Bhopal Disaster

In Bhopal, India — a name that will live in infamy - the worst industrial accident in the world's history killed more than 2,500 people in one week. Some are probably still dying today. The cause was methyl isocyanate, a gas that leaked out of a pesticide plant owned by Union Carbide, an American company. The gas leaked out of three storage tanks, formed a deadly cloud, and settled on the town of Bhopal, killing children in their sleep and leaving corpses in the streets. Death in most cases was caused by drowning, as the lungs tilled with fluid. The unfortunate. temporary survivors suffered permanent blindness and epileptic fits that brought a red froth to the lips

Union Carbide said the accident was caused by a large volume of water that was "inadvertently or deliberately' pumped into a storage tank that held the gas. The company also blamed the managers of the plant for what they said were a series of "critical" violations of safety procedures.

In the middle of his murder-arson trial, Scot T. Mesner was freed when Circuit Judge George E. Mesner was on trial in connection with the April 11 fire that gutted the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity house and killed sophomore Thomas J. Fellin. Honts said investigators had used a "suggestive technique" in trying to find witnesses who would place Mesner at the scene of the fire, and that Read had that might have helped acquit him. The trial was stopped after the prosecution rested its case and before the defense could present its, so the jury never had a chance to reach a verdict. After the trial one juror said he had seen enough evidence to convict Mesner, but another said he didn't think there was enough evidence even to bring Mesner to trial.

Dorm Plans

The University announced its plan to build a new dormitory for upperclassmen and law students. The dorm, which will accommodate approximately 240 students, is to be built on the corner of Nelson Street and Washington Street, across from Warner Center, Currently on the site stands the University mailroom, two houses, and an abandoned Coca-Cola bottling plant.

According to Frank Parsons, assistant to the president, the University also hopes to turn the intersection of Nelson and Washington streets into another entrance onto campus in "an inviting and attractive way."

Additional University housing is needed because of the increase in the student body expected as a result of coeducation and the fact that women often are more likely to want to live on campus, Parsons said.

The school is also planning to build a new University Theater on the land across the street from the dorm site. The theatre, shops, classrooms, and offices will adjoin the old railroad station.

In other money matters, the University began to study cutbacks in such "niceties" as the 24-hour library. Closing the library at night could save up to $20,000 a year, according to University Treasurer E. Stewart Epley. The school decided to leave the library alone.

The Virginia General Assembly passed a bill to raise the legal drinking age from 18 to 21, effective July 2, 1985. A "grandfather" clause was tacked on to the bill to allow persons born before July 2, 1966, to buy beer.

The law was passed to comply with Reagan Administration guidelines, which threatened to cut allocations of federal money for highway projects to states that did not pass a law making the minimum drinking age 21.

Mink Dynasty

The 78th Fancy Dress Ball was held March 8 in Warner Center with the theme "The Mink Dynasty."

The big weekend began on Thursday night with a crowded concert by The Four Tops in the student activities pavilion.

By Friday night, the Student Activities Board had completed the decorations in Warner Center and Doremus Gymnasium. In Warner Center, a 70-foot long mural of a fire-breathing dragon stretched across one wall, multicolored tapestries hung from the ceiling, and on another wall, large ornamental fans were laid out in an artistic display to conjure up images of dynastic China.

On the dance floor, the featured big band entertainment of the Count Basie Orchestra played swing songs for the nearly 4,000 party-goers.

Meanwhile, in Doremus Gym, two other bands traded sets in a setting of Chinese lanterns and cherry blossom boughs: 'A' Train, one of the hottest bands to come out of Louisiana, and Otis Day and The Knights, the popular early '60's style band which came to be well known after the release of the college cult movie "Animal House," in which they appeared.

The $65,000 weekend was a success for the SAB, and only a few problems with vandalism were encountered: some of the ornamental fans were stolen, as well as quite a few handfuls of silk flowers.

Some of the costs for party-goers over the $30 per couple ticket price included long sleeved T-shirts for $9 each, posters for $2, "grain cups", three for $1, and tickets to the Four Tops concert for $6 per person, all sold by the SAB to help keep ticket prices lower than they might be. Buv American

In an unprecedented move, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone appeared on Japanese national television to urge his countrymen to "buy more foreign goods." Nakasone made the speech in an effort to prevent an international trade war with the U.S.

The U.S. Congress, angered by Japan's $37 billion trade surplus with America, had threatened severe import restrictions if some action was not taken by Japan to curb its success.

Nakasone's appeal was full of promises and reiterations of previous commitments but lacked any specific actions to be taken. Critics contended that the speech was merely rhetoric and that Japan is unlikely to change anytime in the near future.

Strong Dollar

The dollar was extremely strong on foreign markets. Consequently, one could find American tourists at nearly all points of the globe spending their dollars with abandon. In a way, the U.S. government's policy of spending with abandon, and thus creating a tremendous deficit, allowed the flood of tourists to inundate the markets of the world.

The high deficit created high interest rates, which were more attractive to toreign investors than other nations' rates, and consequently raised the value of the dollar and lowered the values of other currencies.

Rats, Senator in Space

Space Shuttle Discovery flew the 16th flight in the Shuttle program. A notable addition to the crew was Sen. lake Garn. R-Utah, the first civilian to ride the shuttle.

Seventeen days after the launch of Discovery, Challenger was launched from the same launching pad. Challenger's flight, though, had a tew more problems, beginning with problems launching two satellites, and continuing with major problems in a science experiment involving rats and monkeys. The cages for the animals were not sealed properly, and ended up leaking food and fecal matter into the cabin. The astronauts resorted to wearing surgical masks to avoid inhaling the debris.

Col. Federick Gregory became the first black astronaut to pilot a spacecraft, the shuttle Challenger, in the 24 years of manned space flight.

Which Coke Is IT?

Coca-Cola introduced the first major change in its secret formula in its 99-year history, claiming the new concoction as sweeter and lighter than its predecessor. Pepsi immediately began an advertising campaign exploiting Coke's change. After a few months fielding nasty letters from irate Coke fans, the company brought back the original recipe as "Classic Coke," keeping the new formula as its flagship product

Billyball, Again

After losing 4-3 to the Chicago White Sox on a bases-loaded walk, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner fired manager Yogi Berra and replaced him with Billy Martin, It is Martin's fourth time at bat as a manager for the Yankees; it is also the 13th managerial change in the 11 years Steinbrenner has owned the Yankees.

Mostly Mozart

The Academy Awards ceremony took place early this month and, not surprisingly, the fictionalized account of the life of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Amadeus, swept the Oscars, winning eight awards in all, including Best Picture, Best Director (Milos Forman), Best Actor (F. Murray Abraham) and Best Screenplay Adaptation, among others.

Other films nominated for various awards included Country, The River, Witness, A Passage to India, The Killing Fields, and Places in the Heart.

Did George Marry for Money?

Thirty-six pages of an account book belonging to George Washington were discovered at W&L. The pages, vellowed with age and covered with mold colonies, documented Washington's administration of Martha Washington's first husband's estate and the guardianship of the heirs of that estate.

Lexington scholar Joseph Horrell, who researched the documents, estimated that, by marrying Martha Custis and taking guardianship of her late husband's estate, Washington increased his own worth by 29,650 pounds in the currency of Colonial Virginia. That amount would be equal to approximately $6 million in today's money.

Record Number Apply to W&L

The admissions office received a record 2,639 applications, 1,000 more than last year. Women accounted for 698 of the applications. Coeducation, and the interest caused by it, accounted for the high number of applications. A total of 780 were accepted — 623 men and 157 women — for about 400 spots.

Lexburgers

The Ring-tum Phi conducted a survey of the cheapest hamburgers in Lexington. The lowest priced burger was the 52 cent McDonald's version, the highest was the $3.75 "glorified burger" of The Palms. Other prices were $.59 at Lloyd's of Lexington, $.70 at Kenney's, $.80 at Estelle's Grill, and $1.25 at Wendy's.

Soccer Disasters

There were two major soccer disasters in Europe — both involving British fans. On May 11 a wind-driven fire roared through a wooden grandstand holding 3,500 fans during a Bradford soccer match, killing 52 persons and injuring 211. A smoke bomb thrown by one of the spectators was determined to be the cause of the fire.

Tragedy struck once again on May 30 in Brussels, Belgium, where the European Champion's Cup soccer final was taking place. Before the match, fans of the Liverpool soccer club attacked panic-stricken fans of Juventus, the opposing team from Turin, Italy. Thirtyeight people were killed and hundreds injured in the ensuing rush out of the stands. Most were killed when a retaining wall collapsed. Almost all of the victims were Italians.

WWII Victory Anniversary

May 8 marked the 40th anniversary of V-E Day, the Allied victory over Nazi Germany in World War II. Marking the occasion were ceremonies on both sides. of the Atlantic, but the one that made the news was a visit by President Reagan to a cemetery near Bitburg, West Germany. Presidential aides had chosen the rural cemetery as a place where Reagan could lay a memorial wreath by the graves of victims of the Holocaust. Problems arose when it was discovered that there were 47 SS officers and nearly 2,000 German soldiers also buried in the cemetery. Instead of changing his plans, Reagan decided to go through with his trip, thereby infuriating many WWII veterans and American Jews, among them noted author Elie Weisel. In a remarkable scene, Weisel, 56, a survivor of Nazideath camps, lectured Reagan on his morality in a nationally televised broadcast. Reagan had just awarded him the Congressional Gold Medal of Achievement for his numerous books that describe the brutality of the Nazis and the suffering and courage of their victims. Weisel's moving speech implored Reagan "to find another way" to Reagan chose to ignore Weisel's plea and went ahead with his plans to lay a wreath at Bitburg. The ceremony was covered live by the three major networks and by CNN.

Killer Wave

A hurricane that swept out of the Bay of Bengal killed over 5,000 people throughout Bangladesh, including one island whose population was washed away by a 10-foot tidal wave. Thousands were reported missing and over 50,000 families were reported homeless in one area alone

Indy 500 Spin

In an amazing finish at the Indianapolis 500, Danny Sullivan, driving the Miller American, attempted to pass leader Mario Andretti on turn No. 1 with 80 laps remaining. Sullivan lost control of his car, spun around 360 degrees at 150 miles per hour, and went on to win the race.

When E.F. Hutton Takes . . .

The brokerage firm of E.F. Hutton pleaded guilty in federal court to a scheme that defrauded nearly 400 banks and gave the company millions of dollars in interest-free loans. Hutton had written more than $1 billion in checks that exceed funds it had on deposit at the banks, sometimes creating daily overdrafts of more than $250 million.

Friendly Skies?

United Airlines, the nation's largest passenger carrier, was faced with a pilots strike and had to cancel nearly 90% of its flights. The 4,900 pilots struck because of United's insistence on establishing a lower pay scale for newly hired pilots. The strike was resolved in mid-lune.

MOVE Fire Power

An attack on the headquarters of MOVE, a revolutionary back-to-nature group, resulted in a fire that destroyed 53 row houses in a two-block area of west Philadelphia, killed at least 11, and caused an estimated $8 million in damages. The fire started after a twopound percussion bomb was dropped on the house by a police helicopter.

'85 Graduation

The graduation of the 290 members of the class of 1985 on Thursday, June 6, not only marked the graduation of the last class to graduate from an all-male undergraduate W&L, but also marked the 200th anniversary of the University's first commencement exercises. A special ceremony was held at Liberty Hall to commemorate the occasion

The baccalaureate service was led by the Rev. Peter J. Lee, a 1960 graduate of W&L and bishop coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia.

Other commencement activities included a reception and dance for the seniors and their parents, a luncheon on the lawn in front of the President's House, and two senior class parties on the day before the graduation ceremo-

Although the skies threatened rain, the commencement ceremonies went off without a hitch. President Wilson was the principal speaker, and Student Body President Cole Dawson delivered remarks on behalf of the graduating class.

The class valedictorian was David L. Harrar II, who finished his four years with a cumulative average of 4.019, the second time in as many years that the 4.0 mark had been surpassed.

Material in The Year in the News was compiled from The Washington Post, Time and Newsweek magazines, The Ring-tum Phi, Facts on File, and The Alumni Magazine of Washington and Lee University. National and International photographs appear under agreement with AP/Wide World Photos

Slang Surveys

In the spring of 1985, The Calvx conducted a survey of slang and catch phrases peculiar to the Washington and Lee student community. The completely unscientific survey was handed out to students in Evans Dining Hall and elsewhere on campus. Recipients were asked to list all of the slang terms that they could think of in three categories: general slang (no pun intended), which could be used in everyday casual conversation, nicknames of courses, and nicknames of professors and members of the W&L administration and staff. The first two categories are included here, the third is not, partially because of considerations for good taste, partially because of the potentially libelous content of some of the nicknames.

Most of the responses to the survey have been included here. Please keep in mind that this list is by no means a complete list of slang at W&L, but merely a compilation of the responses we received. A few of the responses to the survey have not been included here because of their relative obscurity.

Also, please keep in mind that, although some of the responses might be considered to be sexist, they are actual responses to the survey, and are meant as an lustorical record and not as a personal viewpoint of any of the editors. - ed.

The Year in Sports

hen you look at the Generals' 6-4 finish in '84, you're not all that impressed. But if you remember that the squad was at 2-4 after Game 6, a 41-21 dismissal by arch rival Hampden-Sydney, you realize the above-500 final mark is worth a

The team opened the season in impressive fashion, with a 36-7 trouncing of Dickinson. The Generals looked as good as they would in any game in '84, getting strong pertormances offensively (214 yards rushing), defensively (holding Dickinson to 133 yards total offense) and in the kicking game (getting a record-tying 44-yard field goal from James White). But reality hit hard in the next three games

Emory and Henry, Centre, and Randolph-Macon outscored the Generals 104-21, dropping the season mark to 1-3. It was a case of the Generals digging themselves holes they couldn't get out of as they tell behind early, 27-0 to Centre, 30-0 to R-MC and 28-0 to E&H. The Generals were also victim to some exceptional performances, facing the likes of the Cody Dearing (RM-C quarterback and eventual Old Dominion Athletic Conference Player-of-the-Year), who had a hand in six touchdowns in this team's 49-9 win over the Generals.

Nevertheless, in that devastating loss to the Yellow Jackets, who would deteat H-SC for the ODAC title, there were some signs that things were starting to turn around for the Generals. As Coach Gary Fallon saw it, "We did not quit. We showed the old W&L spint and enthusiasm and we kept on hitting until the game ended."

The Generals did bounce back the following week, scoring two fourth-quarter touchdowns in five minutes to thwart ODAC-foe Maryville. The next week came the Homecoming Weekend loss to Hampden-Sydney, a case of being so close yet so far from victory as the Generals were within one point of the Tigers at the end of the first half. But mistakes then got the best of the Generals, as a Tiger interception for a touchdown and sacks totaling losses of 87 yards were too much to overcome.

In the final four games the Generals started playing the type of football they had been on the verge of all season. They met the challenge of a hungry

Sewanee squad, defeating the Tigers 17-14. This time the Generals created their own breaks, getting a game-winning field goal after blocking a punt. In the next three contests, the gridders would reverse the trend shown in Games 2, 3, and 4. The Generals blew out Bridgewater, Samford, and Lebanon Valley by a combined score of 115-38.

In the end, the 6-4 finish was a record-breaker, the Generals' fitth straight winning season. It was the first time that happened since the end of subsidized athletics, since the glory days of 1919-24.

Standouts for the gridders in '84 included center Harry Golliday and placekicker White, both of whom were named to the All-ODAC squad. There were other notables for the Generals. Defensively, Jim Lyall and Mark Weaver anchored the line, Bob Berlin and Kurt Specht provided hard hitting at the lineback spot, and defensive backs Tim Janyska and Kelvin Newsome continued their consistent play both on the run and the pass.

Offensively, Gene Girard did not match his 1,000-yard season of a year ago, but still managed fine performances in the face of one-track minded defences and some nagging injuries. Girard led the team in rushing, ahead of junior Frank Surtace, who had his best rushing year as a General. Jon Thornton emerged mid-season as the regular signal caller after a battle with Bobby Wilson and Mark Oluvic, who also have good accounts of themselves. Thornton also had fine corps of receivers including Chris Bleggi, Hugh Finkelstein and veteran Tom Wiser. Perhaps outshining them all was the double-duty performance of Kevin Weaver, who was a stopper at the linebacker spot and a solid performer at running back

Noticable departures for the Generals will be tricaptains Girard, Wiser, offensive-tront leader Pat O'Connell and a slew of 10 other seniors, a group Fallon saw as the reason for the '84 turnaround

t was not the kind of year head soccer coach Rolf Piranian had envisioned

Coach Piranian's high hopes for a possible playoff berth for his 1984 Generals' soccer squad were dashed with the team's first weekend of action, as W&L was outscored by its two opponents by a combined score of In-L

But the soccer Generals were able to bounce back from their less than stellar first weekend, going 500 for the rest of the campaign. The year included a win over Messiah College, one of the region's top teams, and a third-place tinish in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference

The 6-8 final mark reflects a season beset with its share of ups and downs, with the trend more on the down side. W&I dropped its first three, wonthe next three, split its next two, lost three more in a row and ended the season with a win over crosstown rival Virginia Military Institute. The midseason loss of senior tri-captain Mark Sullivan did little to help the Generals' woes.

There were some early bright spots for the team after its opening two losses. The Generals raced to a 3-0 mark in the ODAC, garnering well-earned victories over conference toes Maryville (1-0), Fastern Mennonite (3-2 in overtime) and Hampden-Sydney (7-0). The crucial game for the season came next against perennial conference power and detending champion Lynchburg. The Hornets were just a step better than the Generals, putting three unanswered goals on the board and staving off a spirited comeback to earn the 3-2 victory. The Hornets went on to win the conterence championship over Roanoke, a squad the Generals later lost to by a single goal, 1-0. Thus it was that just two tallies separated the third place Generals from the leaders.

There were a number of leaders for the squad for 1984 Scoring punch for the Generals was provided by tri-captain Billy Holmes, Ken Randby, Gary Clements, John Templeton and Peter Van Son. Defensively, there were some promising signs for next year. Most noticeable was the performance of treshman goaltender Chris Gareis. The frosh shared goaltending duties with the consistent play from starter Jay Werner. Gareis got the shutout in the Generals' upset of Messiah.

Departing seniors that will be missed are Werner, Clements, Sullivan, Rob Coleman, and leff Reichert.

Piranian is ready for next year's challenge. "It's back to the drawing board. We will have to do some things differently," he said:

Cross Country

he only thing hotter than Washington and Lee cross country in '84 — to borrow a phrase from The Ring-tum Phi - was the Jacksons' "Victory Tour!

The General harriers raced through all 14 opponents in their regular season on the way to the Old Dominion Athletic Conterence championship, their second title in three tries. The Generals also trnished fourth at the South-Southeast Regional Championships with captain Frank Pittman earning a berth at the NCAA Divisions III National Championships.

The Generals' 14-0 mark was the first undefeated season in Coach Dick Miller's 32 years with W&L

It was the same story week after week, as the harriers were rarely threatened by opponents. As well, the team depth continually improved in '84 When the season began, about three minutes separated the Generals' first and last runners. By the final meet of the season that gap had been cut to less than a minute-and-a-half.

The team gave an early indication of how good it would be by defeating detending ODAC champion Roanoke in the second meet of the season. On the final weekend of the regular season, the harriers danced on four ODAC foes in what was to be a sneak preview of the following weekend's conference championship meet. There, at Lynchburg's campus course, the Generals rose to the occasion once again, getting performances from Eddie Goundry and Pittman, who finished second and third, respectively. Goundry, Pittman, and Ted Myers earned All-ODAC honors for their efforts.

Along the way to the title, the Generals added another laurel to their stellar '84 season by brushing third in the Virginia State Division II and III championships, the best finish in that meet by an ODAC team ever. Midway through the year, the harriers handed Miller his 200th career victory as the General's mentor.

Departing seniors for the Generals are cocaptains Pittman and Mark Pembroke. The Generals' depth in '84 (there were eight freshmen on the squad) should look to manifest itself in the near future.

Water Polo

ead water polo coach Page Remillard knew it would take a miracle for his Generals to beat arch-rival Richmond and win their fourth consecutive Southern League crown

Well, the miracle tell just short, but Remillard was pleased with the improvement shown by his team throughout the campaign, and, in particular, the consistent good play of his two standouts, Tim Stanford and Bobby Pearson. His squad finished at 18-14-1, the sixth winning season in a row for Remillard-coached polo teams at W&L

In what for all intents and purposes was a rebuilding year - going into the tirst weekend of the season, only two of Remillard's 21 players had varsity experience — the Generals won every game they should have and stayed on the course outlined by Remillard.

Richmond was a constant thorn in the Generals' side as the teams met four times in '84, with the Spiders winning all four contests. The last defeat came in the finals of the Southern League Championships in Richmond Richmond aside, the Generals gained valuable experience against traditional Eastern polo powers such as Brown, Navy, Slippery Rock, Harvard and Bucknell. Also, the young team was able to get big. games against other top Eastern teams, tying Johns Hopkins and beating MII in overtime. And in Southern League play, the Generals rolled over traditional foes Virginia, UNC-Wilmington, George Washington, and South Carolina on their way to the second-place finish.

Pacing the squad on the year were those two veterans, Stanford and Pearson "They could play for any team," according to Remillard Other bright spots included a trio of freshmen — David Hall, David Weaver, and Simon Perez - as well as the goalie play of sophomore Jeff Cohen.

Pearson, who earned his 100th victory as a W&L polo player, is the lone departing senior. With much of his team returning, Remillard is looking tor the 1985 Generals to pick up where they left off ith a daily practice routine that began at 6:15 every morning, there's no question that Washington and Lee swimmers put in a full day Well, all that hard work paid off for head coach Page Remillard and his team as they finished the year at 7-1-1, the best dual meet mark at W&L since the 1977-78 season.

Swimming

The season opened in quite an impressive tashion. After knocking off crosstown rival VMI 62-51, W&L taced tough Division III toe Johns Hopkins, a team the Generals never had beaten Hopkins came to Twombly Pool ranked fourth in the nation, but the Generals dismantled the Blue Jays 66-47, serving notice just how strong the team could be

Leading the way early on for W&L were senior Bobby Pearson, junior Tim Stanford, and freshmen Simon Perez and Eric Sullivan. Each had posted or had been part of a relay team that had posted an NCAA qualitying time by early December. Espegally notable were the early-season performances of Sullivan, who qualified in the distance events (the 500- and 1650-vard freestyle) at the Virginia Intercollegiate Championships held at W&L, and Stantord, who qualified for nationals when he won the 100-yard butterfly against Hopkins

The swimmers came back early from the Christmas holiday to begin 10 days of heavy workouts in preparation for the remainder of the year. The workouts proved successful as the Generals opened January with a 61-44 win at Towson State.

Senior Taber Smith, recovering from mononucleosis, and Perez led the charge against the Tigers with wins in the 50-yard treestyle and the 200-yard freestyle, respectively. Divers Tom

Amico and Mark Chiappara recorded victories also for W&L

Perez, Pearson and Sullivan led the surge throughout January as the Generals raced to a 5-1 mark with wins over Georgetown and Frostburg State. The only loss in the stretch was a 67-46 defeat at the hands of Division I James Madison. But even in this defeat the team got some fine individual performances. Again, it was Pearson and Sullivan. Pearson, battling the flu, took third in the 200treestyle, second in the 100-yard freestyle, and was a member of the winning 400-vard freestyle relay team, while Sullivan won the 500- and 1000-yard treestyle events despite going up to the blocks alone against the IMU swimmers.

The dual meet season concluded with wins over Gettysburg, Mary Washington and a tie against Division I William and Mary, where the Generals fell behind early and came back to even things up.

The final weekends of the regular season the Generals worked on NCAA qualitying times at the Tri-State Championships (where the Generals came in second place, the best conference finish in Remillard's six seasons at W&L) and the Virginia Senior Invitationals

Fast times were the final result and W&L sent seven swimmers to the national championships. In addition to early-season qualifiers Sullivan and Stanford, seniors Pearson and Smith, sophomore Marty Radvany and treshmen Perez and Andy Forbes represented W&L during the championships.

At the nationals, it was Stanford and Sullivan leading the Generals to a 25th place finish in the 80-team event. Stanford earned All-America honors in the 100- and 200-yard butterfly, while teammate Sullivan reached the A-A plateau with a 16th place finish in the 500-yard treestyle.

It was indeed a fitting conclusion to a season that brought great pride to Remillard. He said, "These guys have given everything they've been asked. Hopefully, 10 years from now they'll be as happy as they are today. They've created a great environment and I have been fortunate to be an observer."

Basketball

To say Washington and Lee basketball was up and down in the 1984-85 season is simply to hit the proverbial nail on the head. The Generals went through all kinds of streaks and just when you thought you'd figured them out, they'd come up with a win or trip up with a deteat and leave you wondering again

The season started with positive thoughts from head coach Verne Cantield These positive thoughts were rewarded early when the Generals took top honors in their season-opening Tip-Off Tournament in mid-November.

From its 2-0 start W&L dropped into one of the losing streaks that would plague its effort throughout the season, Canfield's 22nd at the Generals' helm. W&L lost five of its next seven outings, including a 91-76 loss at Hampden-Sydney to open their ODAC season.

The Tigers shot the lights out in Farmville (74.2 percent from the floor), and the Generals could not keep pace despite a 26-point effort from freshman Steve Hancock and 18 from senior forward captain Scott Shannon. The high-scoring game highlighted a statistic that would govern the Generals' play in 1984-85: When W&L opponents scored more than 60 points, the Generals were sure to come up on the short end. Their record in such games was 3-11. The story was nearly the reverse when the W&L detense held opponents below 60. These games produced a 10-3 mark

But with the start of the new term came a change in trends for the cagers. W&L rolled up four wins in a row in early January in preparation for the annual visit to Warner Center by the Roanoke Maroons... Not only were the Generals hot - the four-game streak included the championship of the W&L Invitational and a 58-52 victory over ODAC leader Maryville - they were winning as a team. In the Maryville game, W&L had four players in double figures (sophomore forward Jeff Harralson, senior guard Lex Fitzenhagen and Shannon had 13, senior guard David Wilkinson had 12)

The Roanoke game, as usual, would be big in the ODAC standings. A Generals' win would put them in a tie with Maryville for the conference lead.

The two rivals played a 21-20, back-and-forth first half, but even W&L's "Unknown Fans" some of whom were de-bagged by Roanoke supporters - were not enough to stop a Maroon second-half surge. Roanoke's senior All-America guard Reggie Thomas, who always puts on his superstar hat when he goes against the Generals, paced the Maroons in the second half, finishing the game with 22 points as Roanoke ran away from W&L to get the win, 74-52.

W&L bounced back from the loss, however, winning three of the next tour games, including a return-the-favor 71-52 shellacking of Hampden-Sydney

So, after the slow start, W&L was again playing good ball, winning seven of nine since the start of the term. Of those seven wins, six came in the triendly confines of the Warner Center, illustrating another tried-and-true W&L basketball trend, strong at home, suspect on the road. The season statistics bear out this fact: At home, W&L was a stellar 12-3, but road ventures left the Generals at 1-11

From the Hampden-Sydney win, though, the season lost all rhyme or reason. Despite the play of super swing man Fitzenhagen, who was the Generals' leading scorer in all but one of the last 12 contests, W&L suffered a string of five defeats. Included in the slump were losses to three ODAC foes the Generals previously had beaten (Emory & Henry, Lynchburg and Bridgewater). To add to their woes, the Generals were victimized by injuries to Shannon and Harralson.

Overcoming the slump proved to be no easy task and matters weren't helped any by a rematch 75-64 loss in Roanoke. Again, it was the Maroons' Thomas leading the way, this time netting 37

But back in the Warner Center, the Generals got back on the winning track with one of their best performances of the season, a 94-65 thrashing of Eastern Mennonite. The win, which ended a twoand-a-half-week dry spell, was sparked by Fitzenhagen. Fitz's Isiah Thomas-like spins, drives and dipsy-do's produced 26 points for the winning effort.

The Generals finished the regular season fourth in the ODAC (after a loss to Maryville in their last regular season game) and earned the right to play (again) Mennonite in the first round of the conference tournament.

Playing at home over the Washington's Holiday break, the Generals, although playing minus any student support, got a balanced scoring effort and turned back the Royals in overtime, 63-62. The win got W&L a semifinal date with the regular season

Above. Mike Hudson puts on the steam and moves down the court against Emory & Henry. Lett, Kevin McClatchy pops a short jumper against Averett champions, Maryville. The Scots were just a step too tough for the Generals, winning 60-56.

The loss meant an overall losing mark for W&L, the first in the last five years and only the second under -.500 record for a Cantield-coached W&L team in the last 18 seasons

On the plus side, though, were the performances of seniors Shannon and Fitzenhagen, who both earned All-ODAC honors. Shannon was also named to the All-Tournament team. Indeed, all five of the departing seniors were big contributors to the team effort in 1984-85. Along with Shannon and Fitzenhagen were floor general Wilkinson, all-around performer and captain Kevin McClatchy and defensive specialist Mike Hudson Other bright spots included the play of Harralson (the team's third-leading scorer with nearly 10 points a game), the aggressiveness of treshman Harmon Harden and the pleasant surprise guard play of sophomore Fred Bissinger.

In the end, it was an enigma of a year, and is perhaps best characterized by Wilkinson's simple summation, "We didn't fail completely, but we didn't accomplish everything we set out to do at the beginning of the season

ead wrestling coach Gary Franke likes the number 12, that's as in wins

The 1984-85 season was Washington and Lee's second straight 12-win campaign. Over the last two years, the Generals' record stands at 24-4-1, the most wins in any two-year span since the 24-3 record in 1947-49

This year's edition of Generals' wrestling was a balanced and deep team whose 12 victories came by an average of 22 points and whose only defeats came at the hands of Division I foes.

The season opened less than impressively with a trip to Hampden-Sydney Despite overwhelming the Tigers, 38-15, the Generals lost three of the five bouts actually wrestled Junior Larry Anker's victory at 142 lbs. led W&L to the team win as the Generals were helped by five fortest wins.

Next up for the Generals was a third-place finish in the W&l Invitational. The performance was up a notch from last year's effort. Earning first-place honors for W&L in the eight-team event were senior big men Joe O'Neill (177 lbs.) and Jett Dixon (190 lbs.)

Like their winter sports counterparts, the wrestlers started off 1985 in spotless tashion with a three-match sweep at the Hampden-Sydney Quadrangular The Generals again beat the host Tigers by 23 points, 34-11, and turned back Johns Hopkins, 33-9, and Lovola, 47-3.

Following the Hampden-Sydney attair the grapplers came home and suffered their only losses at the Washington and Lee Quadrangular Division I opponents Duke and VMI proved too tough for the Generals, beating W&L by scores of 34-11 and 32-14, respectively. But the day was not a total loss as the Generals crushed Washington and Jefferson 33-9 The Generals had beaten the Presidents last year by only a 22-21 count

The win (and the defeats), however, was minus the services of senior captain Dixon, who sat out the tirst six matches of January after undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery

The loss of Dixon was offset by the total team strength of the '85 Generals. Often was the case where W&L would get an early lead via the lower weight wrestlers (freshman Steve Castle at 118 lbs., junior Brian Litsted at 126 lbs. and sophomore left Mazza at 134 lbs.). Dixon's spot was ably filled by the tandem of O'Neill and senior Greg Kendrick, who shared duties at 177 and 190

With the return of the captain, however, the grapplers went without a loss for the remainder of the season. The only setback in the run was a 25-25 tie against Howard, where the Generals used wins in the last four bouts from junior Win Phillips (167 lbs.), O'Neill (177 lbs.), Dixon (190 lbs.) and semor heavyweight Mark Weaver, a pleasant addition to the squad who filled in nicely at the heavyweight slot

Included in the season-ending run was a firstplace finish at the W&L College Invitational, where the Generals dominated the field, outpointing their nearest competitor by 3112 points. W&I, took individual honors at five weight divisions and second-place tinishes in three other classes. Along with W&I's dominance of the meet was a superb performance by the "A-Team," the squad's reserve group, who timished sixth in the seven-team event

The season concluded with W&L sending Castle, Lifsted, Anker, O'Neill and Dixon to the Fastern Regionals. Castle led the team with a titthplace finish at 118 lbs

Franke summed up the year with these words, "I think what this year had was balance in classes. We had a good group of individuals, a good group to work with t was said in a Chestertown, Md. newspaper article about three-fourths of the way through the year about the Washington and Lee lacrosse team, and indeed the words rang true throughout the 1985 season.

At the time, the Generals had just lost their sixth straight game, a 14-13 double overtime attair to the best Division III team in the nation, Washington College. The story read, "W&L, the best I-6 team in the nation

The fact is, while the W&L lacrossers lost twice as many times as they went out on the field, Coach Dennis Daly was pleased with the whole effort. "I really think this group of kids and coaches has done what it takes across the board," he said.

Hard working they were without doubt. There even was no team trip to Florida over the mid-term break in February. As tri-captain Rich Schoenberg explained, the week in Lexington was designed to bring the individuals together as a team. "It was different than when we went to Florida, because here we were with each other 24 hours a day. We were almost forced to stay together.

The pre-season workouts proved beneticial in Game No. 1 as the Generals went toe-to-toe with Duke for four quarters before coming out on top with an 8-6 victory. After a close first period, the Generals opened things up and took a 5-2 lead into the locker room. But the Blue Devils came back and W&L was forced to rely on the goaltending of senior tricaptam John DiDuro.

As he did almost all season long, the veteran met the challenge, making 18 saves and even contributing an assist. Also starting a trend that he continued for much of the year, Schoenberg, the faceoff specialist, controlled the midfield confrontations, winning 12 of 16

The ditticult Duke win was only an inkling of what was to come. Next up for the General lacrossers was easily the toughest three weeks any team in the nation would tace. W&L taced North Carolina, Maryland and Virginia back-to-back in those three weeks, a threesome that left the Generals on the short end of a 1-3 record

Daly had said before the season, the schedule would indicate how successful the team could be. "The beauty of our schedule," he said, "is that we will be challenged in every game. There are no automatic wins or losses.

Well, that beauty turned downinght ugly when the Generals traveled to Chapel Hill the next weekend and were handed a 19-5 deteat. Unlike the opener. W&L could not control the tempo of the game, and when UNC exploded to an 8-2 halitime lead, tempo and the game went out the Maryland at Wilson Field produced the second loss of the season, an 11-5 outing that at one point could have gone either way. In what Daly called his team's best outing of the young season, the Terps raced to a 5-1 first-half lead, leaving visions of Tar Heels in the heads of many at the intermission. But W&L countered with some explosions of its own, cutting the Maryland lead to two goals at 7-5 before a fourth quarter Terp rally shut the door for good

In Game 4 it was once more with feeling as the laxmen played the cross-state Cavaliers even for almost three quarters - actually leading 3-1 at the close of the first period - before the U. Va. depth took charge by scoring nine of the last 10 goals to win 17-7

The Generals got tine outings from attackmen Rod Santomassimo, Bill Holmes, Todd Breithaupt and Caulley Deringer Again, W&L also benetited from the in-goal excellence of DiDuro, who turned back 48 Cavaher shots

The three-game monsoon put the Generals in the middle of a slump that would last from March 2 until April 27. The fourth loss in the six-game skid was a trustrating 9-8 loss to Lowson State. It was a bad day all around as General players had $1,200 worth of valuables stolen from their locker room at Towson, while out on a muddy field W&L was suffering through a seesaw affair that ended with the Generals on the down side, despite Schoenberg winning 17 of 21 faceoffs and DiDuro stopping 16 Towson attempts

During the spring break, the Generals had two games, the second being the best game the team played the entire year. First up was a trip north to the Ivy League where the Generals got more than they could handle against a strong Cornell squad, losing 14-6 and dropping their record to 1-5

But in the second game of the break, W&L showed signs it was coming out of its slump. Calling it "a unique sports experience," Daly saw his Generals battle Division III's No. 1 Washington College for four quarters and two overtimes, forcing the extra play with a Jeff Mason goal with just six seconds in regulation and succumbing when Washington scored with only 10 seconds remaining in the second overtime period.

The time performance got the Generals geared for the next outing and they responded with an 18-12 win on the road against Bucknell.

The season took an enigmatic wrong turn when the Generals were dismantled 20-6 by downstate rivals Roanoke. But the lacrossers were able to right themselves in their most impressive and successful comeback of the season, a 13-12 win over Loyola. W&l. fell behind 4-0 to the Greyhounds in the first quarter, but then did an I've-had-enough-ot-this, cut the lead to one goal at the start of the fourth quarter and scored five times to claim the victory.

"They came back because there was something there, something inside them. They won that game tor themselves," Daly said of his charges

The season concluded with a down note at home as the University of Maryland-Baltimore County beat W&L, 9-6. The Retrievers held W&L scoreless for the last 20 minutes of play to secure the win. leaving W&L with its third straight under -.500

The future of W&L lacrosse, although a topic of debate in the season, is in Division I for 1986. Nevertheless, Daly will have some big shoes to fill with the departure of eight seniors

The Washington and Lee passess. Since probably wished their season was reduced to he Washington and Lee baseball Generals one day. Most of the rest of the year they'd just as Coach Jim Murdock faced enough unearned runs, bizarre endings, one-run losses and blown leads to give him more gray hairs than he'd care to remember, but all that was put aside for a moment with the Generals' Old Dominion Athletic Conterence tournament upset of Lynchburg, the seventh-ranked team in the nation.

Unfortunately, tew bright spots were scattered along the journeys to and beyond that upset. The 6-21 final record was unexpected - to be sure - at the outset of the season and was distasteful by season's end

The pre-season outlook in the baseballers' camp was quite optimistic based on the 1985 squad's experience and talent, as well as their surprise second-place finish at the ODAC tournament a year earlier, a finish they eagerly looked to improve

And things started off well enough. The Generals had one of their best starts in recent years, sweeping a home-opener doubleheader against Christopher Newport. The twin bill started oft with an extra-inning affair which the Generals eventually won in 12 innings after falling behind 4-1 in the early innings. In Game 2, W&L again overcame early woes and won 9-3 behind the strong arm and nine-strikeout performance of senior co-captain Billy White.

Junior Hugh Finkelstein and sophomore Milam Turner provided a big one-two hitting and scoring punch in the victories.

But then the bottom fell out of the team's early season optimism as the W&L '9' dropped its next nine contests. The bats fell silent, the fielding went sour and even injuries began to crop up in the slump, which the Generals never really rose

In the winless skein, W&L went three games without scoring a run, while opponents tallied an average of nine runs a game. Included in the skid were tive losses to ODAC foes, leaving the Generals in last place in the conference.

Big innings seemed to be the tell-tale sign of defeat for W&L. Four- and five-run innings were often the case and fielding errors often opened the door for opponents. Murdock was not giving up, however, repeating throughout the bad times that the Generals were still a legitimate threat later on in the year.

Indeed, for a day, they would be, but not until controversy and more losses would plague the team. W&L broke the skid by winning the second half of a doubleheader against Emory and Henry, but tell into another slump, losing nine of its next eleven outings to drop its season mark to 5-18.

The new slump was marred by controversy when Murdock and junior hurler Kirk Breen exchanged words in a 13-9 loss to Hampden-Sydney, prompting the letterman to leave the team for the remainder of the season.

Despite the less than cheery results, there were a tew occasions that gave an indication of what might have been in '85. W&L pitching had a few bright spots and timely hitting showed up in some games to prove that W&L had not cashed in on 1985 just yet. Especially noteworthy was a 4-3 rain-

shortened loss to the ODAC's first-place team Lynchburg

The Generals entered the conterence tournament in last place and therefore were forced to play Lynchburg. The Hornets, who were ranked seventh in the nation, came in as the heavy favorites, but somebody torgot to tell the Generals their place

Sophomore Bill Schoettelkotte stood tall on the mound to get his first win as a W&L hurler Schoettelkotte held things even at 4-4 until the seventh inning when the Generals exploded for four runs. They held on for the 8-5 upset-of-theyear, their season in a game

The win got W&L to a semitinal matchup with Bridgewater The Eagles ended the Generals' dream of a second straight trip to the conterence final by scoring three runs in the ninth inning Schoettelkotte was the star in deteat, driving six of the seven W&L runs with a grand slam, a two-run homer and a run-scoring single.

The season concluded with two more losses as Newport News Apprentice got a five-run fifth inning to beat W&L and neighbor VMI got another big inning on the Generals, scoring seven in the bottom of the ninth to notch their second victory over W&L during the year

The outlook for '86 is guidedly optimistic as only three players, starters Chip Hutchins, Mike Jacoby and White, will be lost with graduation.

One thing's for sure after a 6-21 season, Jim Murdock and his charges have had their fill of tough losses

Track & Field

The Washington and Lee track team had an off season in the spring of 1985 and they still finished in second place in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

The three-time ODAC champs (two indoor and one outdoor) fell short in their bid for a fourth fitle in two years, but only because of an outstanding effort in the championships by champion Lynchburg.

The Generals came up short only on the scoreboard, not on effort as head coach Norns Aldridge (ODAC Indoor Coach-of-the-Year in 1985) praised his charges. "We couldn't have run any better than we did. We got outstanding performances from everyone! I am not disappointed at all in the team."

Those words hold true for his squad's regular season performance as well, the thinclads opened their title defense of the outdoor ODAC crown in good stead by claiming the indoor laurels at the end of February. At the indoor meet the Generals won five of the ten events to earn the title.

Outdoors, W&L looked to continue its unbeaten skein of seven dual meets from 1984. Continue it they did as Division I Davidson become victim No. 8. W&L played unfriendly host and handed the Wildcats a 106-40 shellacking on the cinders of Wilson Field.

Three days later, the track-men ran the perfect string to 10 with a pair of victories at a Bridgewater tir-meet. It was another impressive victory for the Generals as they outdistanced Bridgewater by 35 points and Eastern Mennonite by 72. Indeed, had the two foes combined their scores, their total would still be 12 points short of the Generals' tally.

Making early-season headlines for W&L was freshman Andy White, who set a new school record in the 110-yard hurdles at the Bridgewater meet with a time of 15.2. Juniors Chris Bleggi and tri-captain Chris McGowan and senior tri-captain Mark Pembroke were also on track to open the sea-

The team closed out its regular season with a four-team meet where the Generals pocketed up three more victories. Eastern Mennonite again fell to W&L along with Roanoke and Newport New Apprentice. Despite the victories, there was cause for concern for Aldridge, who was seeing injuries start to cut into his team's depth. Depth was a key to performing well at the conference meet and it was clearly suffering by the end of March as the pulled hamstrings.

The remainder of the season leading to the ODAC Championships at W&L was filled with three non-team score invitationals. At the invitationals, the W&L thinclads worked toward reaching personal bests. W&L got strong performances from junior Mike McAlevey (who spent the spring term in Europe and missed the ODAC Championships) in the javelin, freshman pole vaulter John Carder, shot-putter Tom Murray, sprinter Bleggi, short-distance man Pembroke, and hurdler White.

At the ODAC meet, W&L finished 21 points behind champion Lynchburg, despite scoring seven more points than its championship total from a year ago. Pembroke (800 meters), White (110-meter hurdles), and Murray (shot put) took first places on the day. Other strong performers for the Generals included junior high jumper Townes Pressler, McGowan (a new record in the 400 meters), and John Carder in the pole vault.

Six Generals — White, Murray, Pressler, Carder, Pembroke, and freshman John White — attempted at three different meets to qualify for nationals. Unfortunately, all came up short in their attempts.

But the season was by no means a disappointment. As senior tri-captain Chris Ives said after the ODAC meet, "Everybody did the best that they could do. We knew that we gave our best and we can't be upset about that."

Tennis

It was a long, tough journey, but the Washing-ton and Lee tennis team finally found its way back to Lexington and the Division III national championships to conclude one of the most successful General tennis campaigns ever

The 14-9 regular season mark included a win over Division 1 Virginia Tech, the conference championship, an eighth place finish at the national championships and a trio of all-Americans.

The '85 W&L netters were a young but talented bunch. The top six regulars included one senior, one junior, one sophomore and three treshmen. That youth got an early test with the season's opening match against Penn State. And they responded well, taking three matches from the Division I Nittany Lions, an improvement from the 9-0 defeat by Penn State a year ago.

From there, W&L went on a feast-or-tamine binge that saw them move their record to 4-2. Averett, Emory and Henry, Greensboro, and Indiana (Pa.) fell in the string. The Generals, led by the 10-0 start of junior No. 6 Scott Adams, lost no more than two matches in any of the wins. On the other side, Division II Bloomsburg got the benefit of a few three-set wins to turn back the netters and a top-level Division III Rochester team tarnished the General's national championships hopes a little by defeating W&L, 6-3.

The Generals rebounded after the disappointment, in as strong a tashion as possible, winning seven of their next eight outings, thanks in part to a revamped lineup that put treshman David McLeod at the No. 1 spot. The only loss came at the hands of Division II George Mason

Included in the stretch that closed out the winter term were an 8-1 shellacking of detending Old Dominion Athletic Conference champion Lynchburg (an omen of things to come at the conference championships later that month), a 7-2 win over VMI for Lexington bragging rights and the upset of the Hokies.

The Tech win was a thriller with W&L opening up a 4-2 lead in the singles on the strength of the bottom half of their lineup. Singles wins came from sophomore No. 2 Roby Mize, senior No. 4 Andy Haring, freshman No. 5 Chris Wiman and No. 6 Adams. But in the doubles, the Generals struggled, losing at both the No 1 and 2 slots. It took a come-trom-behind effort by the Haring-Wiman team to close out the victory for the Generals.

The General netters used the spring break for their annual trip to Florida. The ultimate goal of the week's work was to get themselves in top condition for their biggest match of the year, a showdown with Emory, ranked in the top 15 in Division III A strong performance against the Eagles would almost ensure a bid to nationals for W&L

But first was the Sunhine State excursion where the Generals recorded a win against Division I Stetson and were handed deteats by Central Florida, Rollins and Flagler, the latter a 5-4 nailbiter against the second-ranked NAIA squad in the country

The Generals came back in tine form, and after a torgettable 9-0 loss to an overpowering James Madison squad, they went on to stun Emory by a 7-2 count. The win paced the Generals - now rated No. 1 in Division III's South Atlantic Region - on in to the ODAC championships, where they won eight of the nine flights contested, claimed 26 of the 27 matches played during the weekend and earned 71 of a possible 72 total teampoints to win W&L's sixth ODAC tennis crown in the last nine

The regular season concluded with a 6-3 loss to Virginia and a 7-2 win over Radford

But there was more in store for W&L tennis as tor the first time ever W&L received a team bid to the national championships, which were made all the more appropriate with the championships being held at the W&L courts.

Despite losing all three of its matches in the team competition, as captain Haring said, the Generals "showed we deserved to be here." The Generals lost to eventual team champion, Swarthmore, 6-3, fifth-ranked Claremont, 5-4, and sixth-ranked Gustavus Adolphus, 6-3.

But the W&L netters saved the big fireworks for the individual competition. Three Generals, McLeod, Haring and Wiman, earned All-America status, the first time ever more than two W&L players have reached the plateau in one year.

McLeod earned his laurels by advancing to the round of 16 in singles, a trip that included a win over the No. 1 seed Jeff Krieger of Swarthmore. Haring and Wiman, W&L's No. 3 doubles team, upset the No. 5 seeds, Carleton's Dave Treichel and John Flygare, and advanced to the quarternnals before losing to the eventual champions, Swarthmore's Kneger and Shep Davidson, to earn

More of the same type of post-season play could be in store for the netters. With five of six starters returning and several good recruits on the way, it's quite possible the W&L netmen (and women) may be making a few more journeys to the national championships in the coming years.

Golf

he 1985 edition of Washington and Lee golt was, in a word, inexperienced. But the young Generals compiled a 5-1 match record, including Coach E.G. "Buck" Leshe's 100th win as coach of the W&L linksters, and left every indication that the tuture holds bright things for W&L golf.

The Generals received their first setback two months before anyone picked up a golt club. Turner Friedman, a two-year letterman and team captain, did not return to W&L in January. His departure left the squad minus its six lettermen from a year ago. Jumor Greg Wheeler took over the captain's duties.

An NCAA qualitying tournament and the James Madison Invitational served as a baptism for the young team. And well served it was, too, as the golfers raced into the match season with a pair of victories over Liberty Baptist and Longwood.

The strong start continued into the golfers' second outing as the Generals ran their season mark to 4-0 with wins over Bridgewater and Shepherd. The wins also marked a milestone for the golfers' mentor Buck Leshe, who earned his 100th career victory in his 11 seasons at the W&L golt helm.

The Generals were led on their home course, the Lexington Country Club, by treshman Gary Campbell. Campbell carded a 77 on the par 71 course

The linksters suffered their first loss in their next match, putting their record at 4-1. Leslie gave his reserves a chance to show their stuff in the match at Liberty Baptist. The Eagles were 12 strokes better than the Generals' 324 total. The number of strokes for the Generals differed by just two from the first team's go-round in the earlier meeting between the two schools.

Freshman Chip Gist led the Generals' effort, tollowed by classmates James Sowersby and Andy Parkey and senior Mike Lehman

The Generals' regular season concluded with a split at a tri-meet at Bridgewater. W&L outshot Bridgewater for the second time in the season, but again found Liberty Baptist too much to handle. Liberty Baptist's 302 took top honors, followed by W&L's 317 and Bridgewater's 321

Wheeler and Campbell both turned in 75s to pace the golf squad on the afternoon. The win and loss gave the linksters a 5-2 record, marking the 11th straight winning season for Leslie

The season concluded with the golfers' tourthplace tinish at the Old Dominion Athletic Conterence championships. The Generals saved their best for the season finale, turning in a first-day total of 309, their lowest team round of the year. Wheeler led the way, carding a two-day total of 153, good enough for tifth place and all-ODAC honors. It is the ninth time in the last ten years that a General golfer has earned all-conference recogni-

Other Generals turning in strong performances at the championships were Gist and sophomore Mark Zavatsky Both had 157 totals

The future looks bright for the golfers. A strong finish in 1985 and a depth-laden squad — the lone senior, Lehman, is the only foreseeable departure for next year - could spell good things for Leslie in his 12th season as head coach.

BETA THETA PI

Alpha Rho Chapter Established 1876 101 North Jefferson

President George Seavy Vice President Andy Cole Treasurer Dave Butler Secretary Michael Black Rush Chairman Kreg Kurtz

Under the leadership of President George Seavy and a small but solid senior class, Alpha Rho Chapter once again extended the Beta Spirit to all areas of the University.

Betas were proudly represented by Michael Black '86 on the EC, Eddie Villiameter '86 on Student Control, and Chug Lynch '87 on the IFC Judicial Board. Betas were also represented well on the SAB, as always.

Beta enthusiasm was also felt on Generals sports teams, as led by Baseball Captain Billy White '85. Betas contributed to the varsity lacrosse, football, track and soccer teams, as well as the W&L Rugby Club with Earl Glazier '86.

Despite taking a few on the chin, including a close bout with ear-sensitive L.P.D., '84-85 was an enjoyable year at Beta, and with 22 solid initiates and other strong President in Kirk Breen '86, 85-86 looks to be yet another successful year at Alpha Rho.

CHI PSI

Alpha Omicron Delta Established 1977 5 Lee Avenue

President Henry Woods Dewing Vice President Parvis Richard Hamed Treasurer Thomas Eugene Maurer Secretary Joseph Gibson Whelan III Rush Chairmen George Kinkead/Christopher Jakubek The Lodgers returned to Lexington in time for a week of work and "What do you say we have a few beers tonight." During the week we completed the Lodge Bar, the fearsome foursome assembled a large dead soldier shelf, and most of the rooms were painted, all to the tunes of Bruce Springsteen. Then came Rush ... two weeks of intense fun and boredom. The Cruise-O-Matics, but not the Deal were among our awesome parties. After Rush we found ourselves with 17 pledges, an opossum on the fire escape, and a partridge in a pear tree. Mr. Beerslide then took the brothers by surprise as he picked up and acutally dated a good-looking girl. A little too late the brothers realized it was time to tocus on academics as our ranking fell from first to seventh — probably a school record. The parties, however, were good and the dates were interesting. Throughout the year, we were visited by such notables as Drop-Kick Woman, Glitter-Face, Poodle-Head and many others. Chi Psi's annual Casino night party featured the troll woman. We closed the term with our annual Christmas party, during which Santa was almost maimed. Second term was attended by the chosen few who had made grades to return and began with a surprise visit by Kibbles, performing his "Applesauce Flop" for an amazed crowd. As the year wound down, we sponsored an FD Wet T-Shirt Contest at Goshen (dates only), Chi Psi hunting Club, a short-lived HBO Club, and this that and the other. The Lodgers are continuing down the '84-'85/4.0 road, and who knows what excellence we will achieve. BUS DRIVERS?

Alpha Chapter Established 1865 301 East Nelson Street

President Jeff Boswell Vice President Gib Kerr Treasurer Matson Roberts Secretary David Webber Rush Chairman Jack Ruffin

1984-85 was another fine year for the Alpha Chapter of the Kappa Alpha Order. Academically, KA ranked fourth and third for Fall and Winter semesters respectively. Fortunately, academics only make up a small portion of Alpha life. Three nights a week, one can step into the house and hear Alex "Chugmaster" Weidner bellowing the battlecry "Chuuuuuug!" with fellow drinking partners: The Reverend, Gibby-Bob, Buz, Boz, VII, B-age, The Cabinet-maker, Worthless Ho, and the infamous Gigler. Ali Haji was the weekly Lloyd's funburger recipient. Also, a faint voice from the Tramanimal's room could be heard screaming "My Tweeter!" Meanwhile, Murph gets the ..., Bieck scurries, and Parkhurt absorbs ultraviolet rays from the LAMP. Tuck scopes the Hollins chicks, Phil gets a safe date and knows everyone. Barker denies the blame as the smoke clears. Teen idol Tom Cruise retires w/o an IM basketball title. Chip got a date, and no small animal was safe with Foul nearby. The Disneyland crew achieved new lows while the Couch Potato watched the but. Finally, the year could not be accurately summarized without mentioning the Wingspan, Night Tracks with Bo, an excellent pledge class, and Colleen.

Gamma Phi Chapter Established 1922 225 E. Nelson Street

Blasting into the new year, Rush delivered the usual gratuitous supplies of chips, beer, and great lines like: "Hey, darlin"! I'm the fastest gun in Texas! Rusty "That's oregano, officer!" Hartley and "Captain" Zabriskie were welcome returnees from the golden triangle. From amongst the rubble and carnage came 21 new A.M.s. Inspired by Chris Lion, two by two the freshmen entered the garden of Eden.

The onslaught of winter saw the rise of the Square Root Club (founding members: Duby, Reed, Blob, and Art) ... the traditional fusillade of snowballs from our nouveau riche Texan friends

The demise of several cars by Adam "Mr. Sunshine" Rein-The persecution of Chuck "You're wearing THAT to Hollins?" Nusbaum continued unabated, led by "Goldfinger" and "Too plain for a nickname" Hurlbut. The new year was issued with the annual Christmas debacle, and saw the continued dominance of Lambda Chi (under the direction of "Big Hair" Bentley and the L.M. Gods, Steilberg and Renfro) in all spheres of campus life. As always, the major partying force was "Beaker" Adams, J.C., "Sammy", "Cal", Sgt. Spear, and, of course, "grain fountain" DeForest.

"Lefty" Detlefs, "Mr. Butterworth" Sanders, and Mehota kicked off Spring term with a lawn party and volleyball mania. To those not mentioned, sorry . . . Mark "Father Guido" Farmer lost your files. In any case, a good time was had by all!

Lambda Chapter of Sigma Nu started off the '84-'85 year with a successful Rush and capped it off with a big Homecoming Weekend with the Dirty Secrets band. Gonzo started out the house hit parade of casualties by performing a beer slide and splitting his head. The new pledge class organized the annual Halloween party on Oct. 27. On Nov. 2 at 5 a.m. the members began their run to Lynchburg to raise over $2,000 for the United Way. The White Rose Christmas Formal banquet was held at Hotel Roanoke followed by a dance at the house. The pleged class made their annual trip to the three corners of the globe in January. Continuing the Fancy Dress tradition, there was a constant string of cocktail parties and gorgious girls around the house. Lambda hosted a regional workshop for ten area school chapters of Sigma Nu. Snowball fights concluded the year with a final tally of Sigma Nu — eleven and Phi Delt — nine. Spring break came and sent many brothers down to Ft. Lauderdale where a new Beastmaster was crowned in mountain goat style and many brothers saw the bottom of glasses as they celebrated the birthday of Dave Barnes. Shipwreck '85 was a huge success with most people sliding into the fun and still others who dove right into it, like Mike. The whole house was transformed into and island of fun and para-

We would like to wish well to our graduating seniors, Mike Bearup and Jim Murphy. We are sure that they will be a great asset to any task that they undertake.

Memorable Quotes: It's happenin'. Psych. Duder. If she weren't a girl, I'd slug her. Mark, there's something else up there. Solomon, where are you importing your date for this weekend. Kellev-New reigning Beastmaster.

A last word from the editor . . .

To the Class of 1985

ell, here we are, four years older (five for some of us) and deeper in debt. I alk about radical changes on a conservative campus — we've seen a lew. Freshman year cramped rooms for nearly everyone in Gilham. Dayis, and Baker; 15-toot ceilings and a 20-toot walk to the bar (Traveller's Trough for those who have lost a few too many brain cells) for others in the glorious R E Lee Hotel Albums thrown out the windows onto police cars and elevator races for the guys in the Hotel, singles turned into doubles in the doms. All of this so the class of '86 could sleep tight in a newly remodeled Graham-Lees.

And how about that glorious freshman class but trip to Hollins? Followed by

Orientation, the swim test, and Rush with all of its dilemmas

We got to see the end of the magnificent 10-year fund raising and im-provement plan, Messrs. Huntley and Hotchkiss leading the way and bringing in upwards of $65 million

We froze our toes and other extremities to a near frostbite in January

February, 3 ½ long weeks of weather so cold that 1½ inches of ice built up on the inside of the doors and windows of the Library. And the Library either too cool on hot days or too warm on cold days, either way the atmosphere and quietly buzzing lights conducive to sleep, or anything but the work to be done.

Ferm papers, blue books, white books how many of you ever read yours? Road trips, scavenger hunts, Lloyd's turns from lowly last tood joint into fine fast food and a video game arcade, with games such as Gravitar, Dig

Dug, Pac-Man, and Tron, to name a few Fancy Dress, with all of its implications: Who will get "The Bid"? How much for the tux? Where do we go for dinner? How much will it all cost? Will I even remember it all?

The party weeks, nearly every week it seems, which began with Tuesday (later to become Wednesday) Night in the Cockpit, followed by Wednesday hight fraternity parties, Thursday hight road trips, and culminating with the Friday-hight-to-bunday-morning party syndrome. — at least for a few of use Some had "A" hour classes and afternoon labs that were either never long enough to complete the experiment or entirely too long for days of beautiful

And in the Spring, there was Emmer's lacrosse, "Armadillo" and all, more road trips, Futch courses, Goshen, tubing, and catching rays. The winter and spring breaks with trips home, or to Flonda, or just about anywhere but Big

The home or to work somewhere in the summer, back again in the fall-yearly cycle that changed only slightly over the years.

We saw the departure of President Huntley, who left to do bigger and "Best" ver things, and the inauguration of President Wilson, whose arrival -er things, and the inauguration of President Wilson, whose arrival raised questions of his intentions regarding coeducation, an issue that eventually was resolved, ending the era of all-male undergraduate education at W&1

Instead of the extreme cold we had received the year before, sophomore year we were graced with snow. Snow, snow, and more snow! Too bad it came on the Thursday before the Washington holiday break. Many were either stranded in Big Les or stranded on the interstates. Most of the roads were closed, and the open ones were open only to cars with snow tires and chains, tissed, and the open ones were open only to cars with saw the sand chains, with a $1,000 nne for driving without them. Golly, it was only 18-20 inches! Immor year brought the Jeneven EC, an interesting bunch that brought us the great "tie controversy." It all started when the EC unanimously recommended that students take time to dress neatly—a seemingly innocuous act that brought national media attention. Dear old Bobby I nearly got interviewed on ABC's Good Morning America. Fortunately, something more important came up that day. Most students complained, the Kappa Sigs put up a hundred or so thrift store ties all over campus, and the EC promptly reversed the recommendation at its next meeting.

Each of us carnes memones of life at W&L, and this book's purpose is to bring back those memories, especially those of your senior year, 1984-85

To those deserving thanks

The Calux 1985 is a product of many long hours, many rolls of film, and many, many pages of copy. I would like to thank several people who deserve more than the thanks I can other here for their aid in producing Volume 88, among them everyone at Hunter Publishing, especially our representative from Hunter, Charlie Garrison, for his wit and untiring patience; Mike and Dave at Andre studios for their continuing production of high-quality underclassman photos; Patrick Hinely for dealing with RPAs and all the hassle for yet another year, as well as for his photographic contributions appearing throughout the book, Trustee Tom Touchton for his article on pages 8, Jeft Hanna and the news office staff for providing names and dates; and Fontanne Bostic and the print shop staff for their quick and accurate reproduction work.

A special thanks goes to Mark Mandel and the Sports Information Office for his help and patience with many of the University's sports photographs and negatives

Several of the staff members deserve accolades as well. Burt "Tim the one really in control here" Smith for his excellent job in raking in the ads and patrons, Bob Bryant for his long hours with the Underclassmen section and the senior Index, Mike Stachurs for his home and the senior Index. Senior Index, Mike Stachura for his fine writing in The Year in Sports; Reade "Mr. Publications" Williams for his aid in solving the mystery of the Kaypro word processors; and Paul Foutch for his copy-editing skills, suggestions, and contributions to The Year in the News Finally, credit needs to be given to λ B M O.C. (Ex-Business Manager of Calia) Scott Fitzgerald to writing the Great Gabeby, road tripping, studying in Candy, seed to gerand or withing the Great Gastey, road tripping, studying in the job (see photo at right). The Plit. for TV and tables, IHS and ECS for their support and help, and last but not least to lack Ganong, for doing what he did so that we could make him into a legend. Oh, and Len Howard, too.
